To the Hon. John P. St. John, Prohibition candidate for President: DEAR SIR—The undersigned temperance men and prohibitionists in the interest of the cause of temperance and prohibition, respectfully request you to withdraw from your candidacy in the present contest, for reasons set forth in the "appeal to republican prohibitionists as to their duty in the present national contest," dated New York, Sept. 27, 1884.

Blaine's Tour.

HIS SPEECH AT SOUTH BEND.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 19.—The following is Mr. Blaine's speech at South Bend:

Men of Indiana: The struggle in all human society is first for bread. There is no use in propounding fine theories to a man who is hungry. There is no use in commending a political principle to one who is in need of shelter. There is no use in talking philosophy to one who is naked. Food and clothing are the primary requirements of human society, the primary elements of human progress, and to secure this you must put the people in the way of earning good wages. [Shouts of "That's right" and cheers.] I never saw any man moved to enthusiasm by silently contemplating the prosperity of another [laughter] while he himself was in need. To move him you want to make him feel his own prosperity. [Cheers.] The beginning, therefore, and the end of wise legislation is to give every man a fair and equal chance, and to leave the race of life open and free for all. [Cheering.] What agency will best accomplish that? What legislation will most tend to that end? Certainly it will not tend to that end to throw open our ports and say, "Send ye all here your fabrics, made by the cheapest and most distressed labor of Europe, to compete with our own people, who are just opening their shops, buildings and their factories, for if you do that you cannot spin a wheel or turn a lathe in these factories at home, unless you can get your labor at the European prices. ["That's so."] We begin right there. From these considerations we deduce the conclusion that the protective tariff is primarily for the benefit of the laboring man, because if you take in your hand any manufactured article, or cast your eye upon anything which cannot be taken in the hand, you find that the chief constituent element in its cost is labor. In many cases the material is but 1 per cent and the labor is 99 per cent in the cost of the article. Therefore all legislation of a protective character is and must be mainly because labor is the principal element in the cost of the fabric; hence, if there be any man who is pre-eminently and above all others interested in the tariff it is the laboring man. [Cheers.] If you compare the two great political parties in relation to this question, you will find that the Republican party lives, moves, breathes and has its being in protection. [Great cheering.] A protective tariff was one of the first fruits of the election of Mr. Lincoln. We have had it for twenty years on the statute books, with various amendments which have been added from time to time to make it more protective, and the result is that all history, ancient, modern and mediæval, may be challenged for a national progress like unto that which we have made since 1861. [Renewed cheers.] I am merely reciting the facts and figures of your assessors' books, and of the United States census tables, when I say that in the last twenty-three years of the history of this country we have added more wealth, double over, than we had acquired from the discovery of the continent by Columbus down to the election of Abraham Lincoln. [Prolonged cheering.] There must have been some peculiar and potent agent at work to produce this great result. That agent was the protective tariff, operating to nerve the arm of labor and reward it fairly and liberally. [Cheers.] Whether that policy shall be continued or whether it shall be abandoned is the controlling issue of this campaign. All other questions are laid aside for the time. There are many which are worthy of consideration, but two weeks from Tuesday next we shall have an election in every state in the Union to determine with reference to this question, the character of the next congress and the future policy of the government. You have before you the Republican party

PLEDGED TO SUSTAIN THE PROTECTIVE TARIFF

and illustrating that pledge by a specific and consistent example extending through the last twenty-three years. You have, on the other hand, the Democratic party, which in fifty-one years, since 1833, has never in a single instance voted for protection, and never controlled a congress that it did not oppose protection. [That's so.] I say therefore to the laboring men and the mechanics who may do me the honor to listen, your unions, your leagues, all those associations which you have formed for your own advantage and your own advancement are well and proper in their way. It is your right to have them, and to administer them as you choose, but they are not as strong as a rope of sand against the ill-paid labor of Europe if you take away the protective tariff, which is now your background and support. [Cheers.] So do not be deluded by the idea that you can dispense with the protective tariff and substitute for it your labor unions. [Renewed cheering.] I do not distract your attention with any other question. I do not stop to dwell upon the great issues that have been made and settled by the Republicans within the last twenty-three years. That party has made a deeper and more glorious imprint in history than any other political organization that ever was charged with a great responsibility, and it is the patriotic pride of every man who has belonged to it that he has belonged to it and has shared in its labors, its responsibilities, its triumphs and its honors. [Great cheers.]

Mr. Blaine's Speech at Terre Haute, Ind.

The Southern question, as for years it has been popularly termed, is precipitated into the canvass by the South itself, and to neglect to notice it would be to overlook one of the most powerful and dangerous factors in the national contest. To understand that question properly it should be remembered that there are politically two Souths, which we may term respectively the new South and the old South. The new South represents that awakened liberal sentiment which is striving for the industrial development of that naturally rich section of the Union which recognizes the necessity of a tariff for protection, which casts the bitter memories of the civil conflict behind, and which is hopefully struggling in Virginia, in North Carolina, in Tennessee and in other states in the late confederacy. This element includes many men who served in the confederate armies. It naturally affiliates with the Republican party, and it seeks to lead the people away from the prejudices of the past to a contemplation of the majestic future, which wise and magnanimous action may bring to the South in common with the North. The old South represents the spirit of the Rebellion and cherishes feelings of sullen discontent; is perpetually reaffirming its faith in the rights of 'the lost cause;' is full of bitter reproaches against those who triumphed in the war for the union; regards negro suffrage with abhorrence;

MAINTAINS THE "WHITE LINE,"

and is ready to use whatever amount of intimidation or violence may be necessary to preserve its official and personal mastery in the South. It is unquestionably dominant in all the old slave states, and is open and avowed affiliation with the Democratic party of the North. It constitutes three-fourths of the effective Democratic strength in the nation, and in the event of Democratic triumph would be in absolute and undisputed control of the government. The struggle of the Republicans is for the amelioration, improvement and progress of the South as well as of the North, but they are confronted everywhere by the determined and hitherto triumphant Southern Democrats. The aim of the Democratic party, as I have already said, is to obtain the electoral votes of New York and Indiana with the electoral votes of the sixteen Southern states, and it is for New York and Indiana to consider, just what that means and where it would carry them. New York has a greater stake than any other state of the Union in maintaining sound principles of government in upholding the national credit, in perpetuating the financial system which embodies the matured wisdom of the past twenty years. In sustaining the protective policy Indiana has a stake less than that of New York only as her population and wealth are less. Do the citizens of those two states fully comprehend what it means to trust the national credit, the national finances, the national pensions, the protective system, and all the great interests which are under the control of the national government, to the old South, with its bitterness, its unreconciled temper, its narrowness of vision, its hostility to all Northern interests, its constant longing to revive an impossible past, its absolute incapacity to measure the sweep of our great future? [Cheers.] The North and the South, under Republican administration of the government, will ultimately be brought into harmonious relations. In the past ten years great progress has been made toward that result and the next ten years may witness the effacement of all hostile lines, and the absolute triumph of just and magnanimous policies. [Renewed cheering.] But all prospects of that result would be defeated and destroyed by giving the old South possession of the national power. Among the first of the baleful effects that would follow would be the crushing out of all liberal progress in the south, and the practical nullification of all that has been gained by the reconstruction laws which followed the rebellion. The people of New York and the people of Indiana are now asked to aid in bringing about the deplorable result, to be followed by the abandonment of the reversal of the great financial and industrial policies under which the nation has prospered so marvelously since the close of the war. ["Never, never."] I do not, I cannot believe that you will do it, because such a course is forbidden by every instinct of patriotism, as well as by every consideration of enlightened self-interests. [Prolonged cheering.]

Address by the National Committee.

The Republican national committee hails in the glorious victories already won a sure omen of the greater victory that is close at hand. Vermont is still the star that never sets. Maine, captured in 1880, rebukes slander by a plurality of 20,000, a gain of 13 per cent of its entire vote. West Virginia, in place of 11,000 plurality for Hancock, now falls below 3,000—a Republican gain of 7 per cent, which kindles hope that the 153 votes of a solid South may be broken in November. But the result in Ohio is a revolution and a prophecy. Only a year ago Democratic by 12,600, and two years ago by 19,000 plurality, Ohio now gives 12,000 plurality for the lowest Republican state candidate, and on national issues 18,000 for the Republican congressmen. Holding the state and local offices and the whole machinery of elections, the Democrats scattered corruption money with lavish hand, colonized voters, imported professional repeaters, and in spite of the most strenuous efforts to enforce the law against them, cast many thousands of fraudulent votes. Because of this power they had chosen to stake all upon that state, declared that it would foreshadow the result in November, and were strongly certain of success. They filled the air with slander. Local issues led many voters to disregard national questions. Against such odds the magnificent victory is a prophecy of 40,000 plurality for Blaine and Logan in November. With the ratio of gain in other states, it foreshadows an increase of 700,000 in the Republican national vote, and the largest popular majority ever given to any candidate. These victories show the determination of the people that as Lincoln, Grant and Garfield were slandered in vain, so the foremost statesman of to-day shall not be driven from the people's work by the tongue of malice. They show that the Republican party, which was the first to resist and uproot the dogma of "perpetual allegiance" to a foreign power, is chosen by the nation to defend all rights of American citizens abroad. They show that so long as the Democratic party rests all hope of success upon a denial of free suffrage in the Southern states it will ask in vain the confidence of any state where a free vote is recorded by honest count.

BENEFITS OF PROTECTION.

They show that the people will not abandon the protection of American industry, under which the country has gained twice as much in twenty years as it gained in all its previous history; the protection of American labor, which has lifted wages 62 per cent higher here than in England. The people see what stagnation a Democratic "first firm step toward free trade" has caused within the past year. Nine months ago, flushed with victory and boasting of certain successes, the Democratic party made no secret of its blind adherence to British theories of free trade. Now neither a deceitful platform nor a dumb candidate avails to check the stampede from the party. For its voters know that protection has made the rewards of labor greater here than in any other country on earth.

The national committee appeals to the people to make the victory decisive. It is no time for overconfidence, or for neglect of any proper effort. Bare success is not enough. It is time to put an end to the agitation by which the Democratic party prostrates business every four years; put an end to the hope that the nation can be ruled by shotguns in sixteen states and frauds in two; put an end to the villification of the two foremost champions of American ideas by men who do not dare to meet vital issues of national policy. Make the principles proclaimed by our matchless leader—"Peace with the world; commercial expansion in every practicable direction; encouragement of every form of American industry; protection of every citizen, native or naturalized, at home or abroad"—not only triumphant, that the splendid prosperity which they promote shall not again be interrupted by the struggle of obsolete theories and foreign interests for the mastery of this continent. The grandest part of the grandest history ever made by any nation is the work of the Republican party. It rests with you, Republicans of the nation, to carry forward the work which you and your fathers have begun, and to which so many brave and faithful men have given precious lives, that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall be maintained in the land.

[Signed] B. F. JONES, Chairman,
SAMUEL FESSENDEN, Secretary.

Stewart L. Woodford to Beecher.

During his speech at the Brooklyn rink Stewart L. Woodford paid his respects to the slanderers of Mr. Blaine in the following terse language:

There lives in this city one of the most eloquent clergymen in the land, and one whose services in behalf of humanity have been of the most eminent character. I believe most thoroughly in the honesty and purity of that gentleman. My confidence and faith in that man are absolute. But not many years ago there came an hour of trial to that gentleman, when there was nothing between him and utter ruin but the confidence of the loving hearts of the people of Brooklyn. There were letters produced and read upon a public trial then held in this city, and which lasted many months. Had those letters been read and interpreted in the spirit and by the methods pursued by Mr. Schurz in reading and explaining the Fisher letter against Mr. Blaine they would have driven that clergyman from every pulpit in the land and from every home and fireside in the country. [Immense and prolonged cheering, mingled with cries of "That's so!"] And why, my friends, was not that base attack upon the character of this man successful? Simply and alone because the good people of Brooklyn had faith in the honesty and integrity of their neighbor. [Great cheering.] We stood firmly between him and his slanderers, and we saved him. [Great applause.] I want for my old friend who entered the Fremont campaign with me in 1856; who for thirty years has lived in the full sunlight of public life, who faced Ben Hill and his rebel colleages, whose name is forever associated with all the great issues which the Republican party has carried through—I want for that man the same kind of justice from the people of Brooklyn that they have exercised in the past. Let Brooklyn be to-day as just to the statesman as she was a few years ago to the clergyman. But this is not all. The depths to which this political canvass has stooped are enough to bring a blush of shame to the cheek of every honest American. I said when the Democrats went into the home of our candidate and slandered the woman who is wife, mother, and grandmother, surely the men and women of this land who know what fatherhood and motherhood mean will rise up and bury this Democratic party forever. Whatever may be the result of this campaign, I believe it will teach us one thing very effectually, and this is that hereafter we must be gentlemen in politics and not blackguards. I use that word deliberately, as the only one adequately expressing what I mean. The attack upon Mr. Blaine's home and wife and family was and is blackguardism, pure, simple and unadulterated. The decency of the people requires to-day that this attack be condemned by the utter and crushing defeat of the Democratic party and the Democratic candidates. It will be. [Continued applause.]

Dreams and Dreamers.

From Harper's Weekly.

Dreams are in the main referred by the savage either to the entrance into him of some outside spirit as among the Feejeeans, who believe that the spirit of a living man will leave the body to trouble sleeping folk—or to the real doings of himself. When the Greenlander dreams of hunting, or fishing, or courting, he believes that the soul quits the body; the Dyaks of Borneo think that during sleep the soul sometimes remains in the body or travels far away, being endowed, whether present or absent, with conditions which in walking moments are lacking. Wherever we find a low state of mental development, the like belief exists. In Mr. Thurnim's elaborate work on the Indians of Guiana we have corroborative evidence the more valuable because of its freshness. He tells us that the dreams which come to the Indian are to him as real as any of the events of his waking life. To him dream acts and waking acts differ only in one respect, namely, that the former are done only by the spirit, the latter are done by the spirit in its body. Seeing other men asleep and afterward hearing from them the things which they suppose themselves to have done when asleep, the Indian has no difficulty in reconciling that which he hears with the fact that the bodies of the sleepers were in his sight and motionless throughout the time of supposed action, because he never questions that the spirits, leaving the sleepers, played their part in dream adventures.

In the Scandinavian Vatnsdæla Saga there is a curious account of three Finns who were shut up in a hut three nights, and ordered by Ingimund, a Norwegian chief, to visit Iceland and inform him of the line of the country where he was to settle. Their bodies became rigid, and they sent their sons on their errand, and on their awaking, at the end of three days, gave an accurate account of the Vatnsdal, in which Ingimund ultimately dwelt. No wonder that in mediæval times, when witches swept the air and harried the cattle, swooning and other forms of insensibility were adduced in support of the theory of soul absence, or that we find among savages—as the Tejads of the Luzon Islands—objections to waking a sleeper, lest the soul happens to be out of the body. As a corollary to this belief in soul absence, fear arises lest it be prolonged to the peril of the owner, and hence a rough-and-ready theory of the cause of disease is framed, for savages rarely die in their beds. That disease is a derangement of functions, interrupting their natural action, and carrying attendant pain as its indication, could not enter the head of the uncivilized; and, indeed, among ourselves a cold or fever is commonly thought of as an entity in the body which has stolen in, and, having been caught, must be somehow expelled. With the universal primitive belief in spiritual agencies everywhere inhaled with the breath or swallowed with the food or drink, all diseases were regarded as their work, whether, as remarked above, through undue absence of the rightful spirit or subtle entrance of some hostile one. If these be the causes to which sicknesses are due, obviously the only cure is to get rid of them, and hence the sorcerer of the medicine-man find their services in request in casting out the demon by force, or enticing him by cajolery, or in bringing back the truant soul.

Mexican Carpenters.

A Carpenter in Central Mexico earns from sixty to seventy-five cents a day; a mason the same; a common day laborer from twenty-five to fifty cents; a farm laborer who works by the month two to five dollars a month and "found." They work from daylight to sunset, with half an hour at 9 o'clock and again at 3 for breakfast and supper. These hours are very long, but they take it easy, stopping every little while to smoke their cigarros, and accomplished less than American laborers will in six or seven hours' work. Their earnings are barely sufficient to keep them in food and clothes of the coarsest kind, with an occasional "real" over for the bull fight at Pulke; but they are the happiest people on the face of the earth.

Personal Gossip.

Henry W. Shaw, whom the world knows best as "Josh Billings," is staying with his sister at Saratoga. He is now 66 years old, but retains his physical vigor, and his tall figure and grave face, framed in long locks of gray-brown hair, hardly suggests so ripe an age. He says his first literary venture, the "Essay on a Mule," was sold for $1.50.

Mrs. Weldon, an English woman, alone and unaided, defeated a host of English lawyer and M. D's., and proved a distinct conspiracy to entrap her into a lunatic asylum. She possesses remarkable eloquence. Her arguments, as read, are close and crushing, and she is described as having a wondrous charm of expression. She is not prolix, but excessively concise. She is energetic, full of animal life. Her nervous and intellectual organization is intense. When she speaks, fire seems to flash from her.

Were Mr. Under Secretary Burke, who was, with Lord Frederick Cavendish, murdered in Phœnix Park, now living, to him would belong the baronetcy of the Burkes of Glynsk, which has just descended to his brother, Colonel Burke, by the death of Sir John Burke the last of the direct line. The family, which is the oldest of the name in Galway, succumbed to circumstances some years since, and the Glynsk estate becomes the property of strangers. The late under secretary had a good estate, however, in his own right, the revenues of which he never touched, but applied wholly to his mother and sisters.

Reports to the New England Homestead from 325 points, covering the Provinces, New England and New York, indicate that the hay crop just harvested is nearly 30 per cent less than last year. The average yield of the several sections is as follows: Maine, 75 per cent; New Hampshire, 65; Vermont, 51; Massachusetts, 74; Connecticut, 63; Rhode Island, 83; New York, 77; the Provinces, 82; the average for the whole section, 73. Prices are higher than last year, when the crop was very heavy in the great shipping counties. Many farmers will either have to sell stock or buy hay.

Vote the straight Republican ticket! Vote for O. H. Lucken, that faithful old wheel-horse of the treasury, who don't know anything else than to be honest, faithful capable, sober and industrious, faithful to the trust committed to his keeping. We defy, we challenge the Democratic party, or any other man, to put their finger upon a single grease spot on the character of O. H. Lucken or to show one single instance wherein he has beem remiss in his duty. It cannot be done and that is the reason it is not done. We do not doubt his re-election in the least, but should like to see his majority bigger than the snow-bank that covered up the Grand Forks, Crookston, Lake of the Woods, Duluth and Go-to-Thunder Railroad Company's hopes—and busted the country. (?) Vote for O. H. Lucken.

Vote the straight ticket. Vote for P. J. MuGuire for Auditor, a man who has been the best Auditor Polk County ever had; who restored the office from chaos and brought it up to its present high state of excellence; who has now the high opinion of the Examiner so that he pronounced the office the best regulated, the best managed in the State; who has now the confidence and high esteem of every business man and every other man in the county; a man who, when last summer he had decided to retire from the office was deluged with letters from all over the county requesting him to accept the office once more. We are not afraid but that he will be elected, but we would like to see it done by an overwhelming vote, one that shall attest to the fullest his great popularity. Vote for P. J. McGuire.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for W. F. Zwickey for Sheriff. When a man has fulfilled the duties of that office for one term so well that in so hotly a contested election as this is, NOT ONE INSTANCE of anything to his discredit has been brought out, is it not good and sufficient evidence that he is worthy and well qualified? The Democratic heart panteth after the position, and a pack of hungry, howling independents are starving to death after it, yet NOT ONE of the whole crew has published a lisp to the discredit of Sheriff Zwickey. Why not? Simply because they can't. They don't offer a better man and the only reason they have for asking a man to vote for them is because "You know me, you know, and I need the office more than Mr. Zwickey does!" If Mr. Zwickey is a true-blue Republican and has made an honest, efficient Sheriff, he DESERVES something at the hands of his party. HE DESERVES THE FULL PARTY VOTE and should have it unless there exists some good reason, such as malfeasance in office, treason to the party, or some other grave offense and had any such reason existed it would have been brought out long enough since by the opposition. As he has had experience he is for that reason the best man for the office, for not one of his opponents have had that experience. If, then, Mr. Zwickey is the best man for the position in the field, and the Republican party owes him the re-election, it is the duty of every true Republican to stand by him and make his majority so emphatic that it will effectually rebuke this cronic habit of trotting out an independent candidate at every election. Vote for W. F. Zwickey and the straight Republican ticket.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for A. D. Stephens for Register of Deeds. The Democrats, while they do not expect their ticket to win, have hopes of capturing this position. They have placed in nomination a man little known in Polk County, and while they cannot find a flaw in the character of Mr. Stephens, they have given encouragement to an independent in hopes to hopes to beat him in this way. Mr. Stephens is a man of good education, a hard worker, and every way qualified to fill the office acceptably to all, and he deserves the hearty support of every true Republican. He received the largest vote in the convention of any candidate before it, and while the opposition to him for purely personal and selfish reasons, is determined and bitter, there is no good reason in that that he does not deserve and should not receive the full party support. It should not be said of the Republican party that they held their convention and nominated their ticket, in putting a good one the field and then let it get beaten for no earthly reason save because some sorehead or other happened to run, or even that they allowed one man on the ticket to be defeated. Such a farce should not be allowed. If these conventions are not to determine who are the fittest men and to make a ticket, what are they for? After the party has held an honest, square convention and made their ticket they are in honor bound to support it with the full party strength and see that every man on it is elected, otherwise these conventions become a farce—mere boy play. Every member of that convention ought to take off his little coat and work for his ticket, if he did that the entire ticket could easily be elected, and it would be. Vote for A. D. Stephens for Register of Deeds.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for P. C. Schmidt for County Attorney. Mr. Schmidt studed law with Judge Frisby, of Wisconsin, by whom he was admitted to the bar and who certifies his honesty and ability in the highest terms. He has the highest respect of all of those with whom he has come in contact since he has resided in Polk County, and although a miserably garbled, so-called "affidavit" of his is said to have been put into the field for the purpose of ruining his further prospects both political and otherwise the thing is almost universally condemned by the leading Democrats even, and every honest Republican will do all in his power to see that Mr. Schmidt is sustained at the polls next Tuesday. This attack is most cruel as it threatens his sacred honor, most cowardly, as it is a stab in the back at so late an hour as to preclude the possibility of Mr. Schmidt's having an opportunity to reply to it by showing up what his life is and has been since his early boyhood, a showing that would not fail to convince the most critical of his honesty and uprightness. It is a blow that was calculated to scare Mr. S. out of the field, throw the Republican ranks into confusion and defeat the county ticket. We are glad to know that the leading men in the Democratic party do not endorse it, but on the other hand condemn it, calling it a mere low-lived, cowardly trick, and are loud in their expressions of condemnation. Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for P. C. Schmidt for County Attorney.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for Jas. G. Bl—(we nearly said James G. Blaine for Probate Judge, the names are so similar and the men are so near alike " wan man as good as the other"—only Blaine is running for the presidency instead; that is the only difference.) McGrew for Judge of Probate. James G. McGrew is one of the solid men on the ticket so far as ability, honesty and fitness for the office is concerned. The Democrats are wont to refer to the fact that once in every thirty years all of the property passes through the hands of the Peobate Judge, and urges for that reason the support of an experienced lawyer and an honest man. That is a good argument and good common sense. The office does demand such a man and James G. McGrew is just the man that the office needs. He is a lawyer of long experience, has been a law maker, was one of the bravest soldiers who ever shouldered a musket and as a private citiven stands among the first in the land. Every reason the Democrats advance for their candidate applies with stronger force to the Republican candidate. A man of real merit is always a modest man—seldom blows his own trumpet and for that reason Mc. McGrew has never urged his own election in the columns of his paper, but the Republican party should not see him slaughtered by any means. There is no better man on any ticket for any office than Mr. McGrew. Every old soldier should vote and work for him. Every true Republican should vote and work for him. Vote for Jas. G. McGrew for Probate Judge. Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Voto for Ole L. Hamery for County Surveyor. Mr. Hamery, besides being a thoroughly competent surveyor has the advantage of possessing the most complete set of instruments ever brought to the county, and is thus prepared to discharge his duties acceptably and well. We have not a doub of his election, as he is every way worthy and well qualified. Vote for Ole L. Hamery. Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for D. E. Hatlestad for Court Commissioner. This office demands the services of a competent lawyer and none more worthy can be found than Mr. Hatlestad. He is a young Scandinavian who has made many friends since he has practiced law in our midst, and as he is worthy and well qualified he will doubtless "get there" by a large majority. Vote for D. E. Hatlestad. Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Don't listen to campaign lies. Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Having learned that there are certain charges made, or to be made, against me, detrimental to my character, just prior to the eve of election, thereby giving me no opportunity to answer or refute, I have procured the following certificates from the leading citizens of the village of West Bend, Wis., my old home, and where I resided nearly all my life up to the time I removed to Red Lake Falls, Minn., which will certainly be an answer to any and all charges which can be made against me.

TO ANY WHOM IT MAY CONCERN AND TO THE CITIZENS OF POLK COUNTY, MINN., IN PARTICULAR:

We, the undersigned, citizens of Washington County, Wisconsin, take great pleasure in stating that we have been well acquainted with Mr. P. C. Schmidt, Jr., the present candidate for County Attorney in Polk County, Minn., from boyhood to the time when he removed to the State of Minnesota, a short time since, and that he is an honest, capable and trustworthy young man. We make this statement without reference to politics or to his cadidacy for any office, as the most of us are members of the Democratic party, but at the same time we can cheerfully and fully recommend him to any position of honor and trust.

†Republican nominee for Congress against General Bragg.

Vote the straight Republican ticket!

We cautioned voters to look out for roorbacks, and now it seems that one has been brought out, or is to be against Mr. P. C. Schmidt. Mr. Schmidt's old friends in Wisconsin, who have known him from boyhood, many of whom ocupy positions of trust and honor, all place implicit trust in him, pronouncing him an honest, upright young man. We have examined many letters in Mr. Schmidt's possession to that effect. Mr. Schmidt has also handled thousands of dollars in trust within the past few years without the scratch of a pen of security, and he has the documents to prove it, and would time permit he could lay before the people of this county such a mass of evidence as would convince them that he is in every way upright and honest and worthy of confidence and respect. This miserable roorback, conceived in iniquity and brought forth in sin, should prove a boomerang to slay the instigator. Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Vote for O. H. Lucken for Treasurer. Vote the straight ticket all through.

Mud Throwing.

Up till within a few days the campaign in this county has been reasonably clean but now it seems the mud throwing has commenced, by a cowardly attack on P. C. Schmidt Esq., who, it was supposed, being a stranger would be too weak to resist effectually and the position of county attorney would be lost to the Republicans. The friends of Mr. Schmidt have in their possession a pointer that would make honors easy between the candidates but Mr. Schmidt counsels them to refrain from publishing it because he detests the practice of mud throwing and does not wish to engage in it. If it is done it will be against Mr. Schmidt's advice as he is too honorable to use such a means of warfare. Vote for P. C. Schmidt and the straight Republican ticket.

Vote and work for the straight Republican ticket. Remember that "Eternal vigilance" is the price of victory.

Vote the straight Republican ticket whatever else you do.

Vote the Straight Ticket.

Paul Bataglia says—vote the straight Republican ticket though wheat is cheap furniture is cheaper and you can vote the straight Republican ticket procure as much furniture for a vote the straight Republican ticket dollar as you could vote the straight Republican ticket when wheat was higher. Vote the straight Republican ticket and don't you forget it!

"YOU MUST DO AS WE DO OR WE WILL SHUT YOU OFF!" Farmers, how does that threat of the monopoly sound in your ears? Are you living under a free government, enjoying equal rights with all? Does that look like it? Well, what are you going to do about it? Are you going to vote for men who will demand an investigation and a remedy, or are you going to vote for men whom if they are interested at all are interested on the side of the monopoly? You have a chance to help yourselves or you have a chance to help yourselves. The only safe way out is to vote for the farmers candidates every time. Remember, "YOU MUST DO AS WE DO OR WE (the Millers' Association) WILL SHUT YOU OFF!" and vote for men who are pledged to correct that vote the Republican ticket.

Vote Straight.

Hon. S. G. Comstock says we have the best and most solid city in the Red River Valley, vote the straight Republican ticket. He says her prosperity is phenominal vote the straight ticket, and her financial standing the best vote the straight Republidan ticket.

The requirements of the office of the President of the United States demands the election of the greatest statesman of the age to the important office, and while many might, from gallantry perhaps be prompted to vote for Belva Lockwood, how can they do it, for indeed Belva is not—that is she cannot be said to be in any sense a—i. e. we mean, you know, Belva ain't a—Oh, dear! how can we get it! We mean that probably Belva cannot in any sense be considered to be a StatesMAN, that is, as it were, so to speak, begging her pardon all the same, which renders her positively ineligible. Don't it? Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Every Republican who shall see the shameful attack upon the Republican nominee for County Attorney should show it to his neighbors and explain how an error said to have been committed when M. Schmidt was a mere lad of thirteen years, is raked up to ruin his political and business career and every voter in the county should sustain Mr. Schmidt by voting for him and thus fitly rebuke the low-lived outrage.

'ROUND HOME.

Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Ole Bang has received a carload of the celebrated Mitchels' La Crosse Bottled Beer which he is prepared to dispose of in case lots or otherwise.

A farmer named Michael Anderson, living in Roxbury, lost his house by fire on the 9th inst. It took fire about 2 o'clock in the morning and the family barely escaped with their lives. The house and furniture was a total loss.

Al. Kaiser, he of The Thirteen Towns, spent Sabbath with friends in the city. Al. reports that the farmers in that favored section are going into stock pretty generally instead of wheat. That's business. They ought to start several creameries up there.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for W. F. Zwickey for Sheriff.

Mr. P. J. LaChapelle is home for a few days making preparations for a trip to the great World's Fair at New Orleans where he is to take his elks and antelope. He says he is under contract with the Governor to exhibit his animals and that if he could find the tame buffalo that went through the city about Oct. 17th, he would buy and take them also.

L. S. Aker, of the town of Hubbard was in to see us last week. Mr. A. is one of those intelligent, progressive farmers whom it is a pleasure to meet and converse with on farm matters. He tells us that at least one-half of the cultivated land in Hubbard will be left out for summer-fallowing next spring and that farmers are turning their attention more to stock.

Otto Kankle, of the mill firm of Sobler & Co., of Garfield, was in the city on Monday. He says the mill will be in complete running order inside of three weeks when they will be prepared to do custom grinding at short notice and as they will have one of the most complete mills in the Valley can guarantee as good flour as the best. The mill is 30x42, four stories high, has three run of buhrs and can turn out 100 barrels of flour per day.

Mr. John Bigham, successor to J. S. La Duc & Co., Fertile, was in the city on Monday on his way to St. Paul for more goods. Mr. B. is an old Wabasha County man and has spent same time previous to coming to Polk County, in Spokane County, Washington Territory. He says that Territory is no place for a white man to live in, especially if he has lived in Minnesota awhile. He is glad to be able to get back to old Minnesota where one at least can get enough to eat. He reports business at his new store excellent since he took possession. He will stock up fully and soon be ready for the fall trade.

Charles Kretzschmar was in from Red Lake Falls on Saturday, looking as fresh and smiling as you please, which is accounted for in the fact that on the 11th inst., Charlie took unto himself an help-meet, a worthy and accomplished lady, Miss Annie Hoernig, sister to Mrs. W. A. Schrieter of Red Lake Falls. The ceremony was performed at Oskosh, Wis., and the happy couple have returned to Red Lake Falls, their future home. Mr. K. is one of the best known and most highly respected business men in Polk County and his many friends will heartily unite with THE JOURNAL in wishing him and his accomplished bride a long and prosperous life.

Coroner Shepard says that the report that was spread around that Tom Evenden, the engineer who blew up the engine at Beltrami, was drunk at the time is contradicted by the evidence of the fireman at the inquest. The foreman makes oath that he was with Tom all day Sunday and that Tom only took one small drink of brandy, that he drank no liquor after that, that he was perfectly sober at the time of the accident. The report that he was drunk is an act of injustice to Tom's memory that every paper that has published it should hasten to correct, in the light of this testimony. Mr. Shepard says Mr. Street is very indignant at the report and is sifting the matter to find where it originated. Mr. S. could more easily correct the impression by causing the report of the Coroner's inquest to be published in all papers that have published the error.

'ROUND HOME.

Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Ole Bang has received a carload of the celebrated Mitchels' La Crosse Bottled Beer which he is prepared to dispose of in case lots or otherwise.

A farmer named Michael Anderson, living in Roxbury, lost his house by fire on the 9th inst. It took fire about 2 o'clock in the morning and the family barely escaped with their lives. The house and furniture was a total loss.

Al. Kaiser, he of The Thirteen Towns, spent Sabbath with friends in the city. Al. reports that the farmers in that favored section are going into stock pretty generally instead of wheat. That's business. They ought to start several creameries up there.

Vote the straight Republican ticket. Vote for W. F. Zwickey for Sheriff.

Mr. P. J. LaChapelle is home for a few days making preparations for a trip to the great World's Fair, at New Orleans where he is to take his elks and antelope. He says he is under contract with the Governor to exhibit his animals and that if he could find the tame buffalo that went through the city about Oct. 17th, he would buy and take them also.

L. S. Aker, of the town of Hubbard was in to see us last week. Mr. A. is one of those intelligent, progressive farmers whom it is a pleasure to meet and converse with on farm matters. He tells us that at least one-half of the cultivated land in Hubbard will be left out for summer-fallowing next spring and that farmers are turning their attention more to stock.

Otto Kankle, of the mill firm of Sobler & Co., of Garfield, was in the city on Monday. He says the mill will be in complete running order inside of three weeks when they will be prepared to do custom grinding at short notice and as they will have one of the most complete mills in the Valley can guarantee as good flour as the best. The mill is 30x42, four stories high, has three run of buhrs and can turn out 100 barrels of flour per day.

Mr. John Bigham, successor to J. S. La Duc & Co., Fertile, was in the city on Monday on his way to St. Paul for more goods. Mr. B. is an old Wabasha County man and has spent some time previous to coming to Polk County, in Spokane County, Washington Territory. He says that Territory is no place for a white man to live in, especially if he has lived in Minnesota awhile. He is glad to be able to get back to old Minnesota where one at least can get enough to eat. He reports business at his new store excellent since he took possession. He will stock up fully and soon be ready for the fall trade.

Charles Kretzschmar was in from Red Lake Falls on Saturday, looking as fresh and smiling as you please, which is accounted for in the fact that on the 11th inst., Charlie took unto himself an help-meet, a worthy and accomplished lady, Miss Annie Hoernig, sister to Mrs. W. A. Schrieter of Red Lake Falls. The ceremony was performed at Oskosh, Wis., and the happy couple have returned to Red Lake Falls, their future home. Mr. K. is one of the best known and most highly respected business men in Polk County and his many friends will heartily unite with THE JOURNAL in wishing him and his accomplished bride a long and prosperous life.

Coroner Shepard says that the report that was spread around that Tom Evenden, the engineer who blew up the engine at Beltrami, was drunk at the time is contradicted by the evidence of the fireman at the inquest. Wintering Young Pigs.

Pigs born later than the first of October will need good care and skillful management to keep them in a thrifty, growing condition through the winter. This is particularly the case if you keep them in large numbers, and it is a good plan to sell all you can before winter sets in. People who keep only two or three pigs to eat up the slops from the house can handle their late pigs to better advantage than the large farmer or breeder. Such young pigs milk, greasy water, or broth and bread, or cooked potatoes, with corn meal pudding; these are more likely to be liberally furnished from the kitchen when you have only two pet pigs than when you have two score or two hundred. Whatever method of feeding is adopted, let it be liberal. Let them have all the good feed they will eat—no more, no less. Let them have good, dry, comfortable quarters to sleep in, and disturb them as little as possible. Pigs are in part hibernating animals. The more they sleep the better for them and their owner. We do not want to fatten pigs in winter. We simply want to keep them in healthy, growing condition, and the fatter they are when winter sets in, the easier it will be to carry them through the winter. Pigs well wintered, are in good condition to thrive well on grass and clover next summer. They will do far better on pasture alone than young spring pigs. We are not now advocating having young pigs come in the autumn, but if you have them and cannot sell them, or do not wish to, then take the best of care of them, and feed liberally. The most profitable pork we have ever made, was from young pigs which had been well cared for through the previous winter, and the next summer fattened on clover pasture.—[Joseph Harris in American Agriculturist for November.

Live Stock in November.

There will soon be a daily out-go of fodder, and the problem of winter feeding, and care of live stock, is to so govern this expenditure, that the best returns may be obtained. All the farm animals should be in good flesh and health upon the opening of winter. If these conditions are continued, the stock are well kept, and will not come out "spring poor" at the end of the winter. Manure is not to be overlooked in the winter system of farm management. Farmers, more than ever before, must feed for manure, and husband it when obtained. An abundance of wholesome food, plenty of pure water, warm, dry quarters, and sufficient fresh air, are four of the leading essentials in wintering farm stock. It does not follow from this, that the animals must be kept in the stable, or under the shed at all times. Frequent exercise in the open yard is profitable when the weather is suitable. Keep the work horses busy in the field preparing for the coming spring, and feed them well with a variety of food. Colts need to be pushed in their growth with rich food and good care. Cows taken up from grass, need a mixture of hay, corn-fodder, and meal—all they will eat up clean, or, else the flow of milk will greatly decrease. One-third of a cow's allowance is not too much for a calf. Sheep may be the last stock to go into winter quarters. Keep only thrifty sheep through until spring. Fattening pigs should now be growing rapidly. Grain is low and meat is high, therefore convert the former into the latter. There are many things that will add to the comfort and convenience of caring for live stock in winter. Provide ample feeding room for all animals. Place the feed racks, etc., where most convenient.—[American Agriculturist for November.

Food for Fattening Swine.

Experiments have proved that corn is not the best food for the production of pork when fed alone, but it is employed more extensively than all other grains, roots, and vegetables together. If used as a chief article in combination with other foods it is unequalled by any other cereal or vegetable that can be successfully grown over as great a range of country. Peas, barley, oats, mangels, potatoes and artichokes are undoubtedly valuable to a certain extent, but they can never supersede corn for reasons obvious to every intelligent farmer. We shell corn and soak it in water twenty-four hours to soften it, because some hogs with defective teeth, cannot thoroughly masticate it when hard, and consequently waste a great deal. Soaked corn contains all the fattening qualities of cooked corn, and is as digestible. Soaking costs nothing; cooking is expensive. For soaking corn it is best to use two tanks or tubs. When a cheap power can be obtained it would probably pay to coarsely grind or crack the corn; twelve hours would then be sufficient for soaking. For variety, and to keep the hogs in healthy, thrifty condition, feed potatoes, mangels, peas, artichokes, oat-meal, and bran or middlings mixed to a mush with skim milk or slops; even if only in small quantities they will prove very beneficial. Intelligent observation and experiment will show how it can be done. Remember that warm, dry, well-bedded sheds are absolutely essential to profitable feeding.—[From Prize Article in American Agriculturist.

The Farmer's Liability to His Hired Man.

There are duties of a master to men, which, if not faithfully performed, render the master liable for the injury resulting to the men from such failure: 1. To exercise due care in the hiring and retention of employees. 2. To exercise due care in the purchasing and retention of machinery. 3. To exercise due care in keeping his buildings and premises in safe and proper condition. 4. To exercise due care not to expose his men to other than the ordinary risks of the business for which they hired. Among the general duties of the last group are: One of the risks which a workman assumes when he engages in any employment, is that which arises form carelessness on the part of his fellow-workmen. If two farm hands, both presumable competent, are set to work together, and one carelessly injures the other, the injured workman has no claim therefor upon the master. But if the master failed in the first duty above set forth, i. e., if he hired a man whom he knew to be incompetent, or if he did not exercise due care to care to ascertain that the man was competent, then he, the master, would be liable for injury suffered through such incompetence by another workman, without fault on the part of the latter. To illustrate: Suppose a farmer hires a careless boy, and sets him to driving a spirited team; if the boy by his carelessness allows the team to run away and injure another workman, the former will be liable. He has here failed in his duty to exercise proper care in the selection of his employees. But if he had used the caution of an ordinarily prudent man in selecting a person competent to drive the team, and the man so selected had still proved careless and allowed the team to run away and injure a workman, the master would be relieved from liability for the damage done.—[H. A. Haigh in American Agriculturist for November.

Everybody declares that this weather is just lovely enough for anything.

The Farmers' Union Elevator Company, at Carman, is now buying wheat.

Webb's machine commenced on a well at Markham's on Wednesday afternoon and they have a hole in the ground 80 feet deep.

From the Chicago News we have received a handsome and valuable campaign map of the Northern States, made by Rand, McNally & Co., of Chicago.

Notwithstanding dull times our citizens have been doing a big banking business of late, which fact renders their residences better prepared to resist the inclemency of the weather.

Ladies Foster patent lace kid gloves, black and colored, reduced from $1.50 to 75 cents, at the New York store.

The New York store are leaders for low prices on blankets, flannels, underwear, boots and shoes, etc., etc. Call and see them.

A granger dropped in to see us recently and chat upon the wheat question. "By the way," said he, during the talk, "I see in THE JOURNAL a great deal about the P. & H. Co. What do you mean by the P. & H. Co., anyhow?" "Why," we replied in our blandest terms, "the P. & H. Co. is the short way of writing the Pillsbury & Hurlbut Company." "Oh, that's it is it," said he, "I didn't know but it might mean the Purgatory and Hell Combination, judging by their actions!"

We do not wish to seem importunate in this matter, but in order to meet our obligations and to make THE JOURNAL all that our friends desire it, WE MUST have SOME money. If every one who owes us on subscription would kindly call and settle we could pay all we owe and could resume our quarto form. We believe we need not allude to the fact that we have put in a great deal of money to make THE JOURNAL a good paper and a great deal of that money has been trusted out to our patrons and friends. We have not kept persistently dunning our friends for that money and probably should not at this time if our needs were not pressing, and we trust that our friends will fully appreciate all these things and now that we are in need of their help will heartily respond thus placing us under lasting obligation to them. Please call and settle [illegible] amounts.

You can buy a good colored blanket for one dollar, at the New York store.

Mr. Wm. Kertson takes Geo. Buckham's place at the rink.

Wm. Webb has struck a 180 barrel well on lawyer Pierce's premises on Houston avenue, at a depth of 154 feet. Flowing wells are getting to be quite common in Polk County.

Mrs. Wm. Stuart departed this week for the Hot Springs for the benefit of her health, which for some time past has been quite poor. We trust that she will return very much benefitted by the trip.

Lizzie Evans in Fogg's Ferry.

This famous little soubrette will appear at the Opera House next Friday, Nov. 7th, as Chip in Fogg's Ferry. Miss Evans is one of our favorite actresses, and she will produce this famous play with the same company, original scenery and effects as played in the Park Theatre, New York. The following is from the New York News, May 22d, 1884:

The large business now doing at Tony Pastor's Theatre, is due to the appearance of Miss Lizzie Evans as Chip in the comedy-drama, "Fogg's Ferry." The play is neither better nor worse than many now in possession of the stage, and which merely give opportunity for a display of the peculiar talents of the star for whom such plays are written. The drama is interesting for the reason that it is all about Chip; and that character, as played by Miss Evans, is as sunshinny a piece of dramatic effervescence as has been seen in this city in a long time. The greatest charm in her acting is the utter unconsciousness of her doing anything out of the ordinary ways of life, which, added to her pretty, bright, interesting face and engaging manner, makes her performance of Chip stand out with the very best of the kind on the stage. Her sudden transitions from laughter to seriousness, in which there are tears in her voice, and again back to infectious merriment, are most remarkable, and show wonderful power in moving the part to either sadness or mirth. Miss Evans is pettite in figure and as graceful as a fawn. She sings with much expression and very sweetly, and dances with considerable skill. Taken all in all, she has no superior in her line on the stage to-day, and after a couple of years more of experience, she will have no equal. The enthusiasm of the audience knows no bounds, and laugh succeeds laugh, and round after round of applause testifies how much she is appreciated and admired.

The Election.

The election has proved to be very close—so close as to be yet a matter of doubt but the indications are strong that Blaine and Logan are elected. The early returns from large cities and precincts adjacent to telegraph lines showed a very small majority for Cleveland but the more remote places as they report are changing that, and as the Cleveland strength is nearly if not all reported it is very reasonable to claim the election of Blaine and Logan by a nice majority. In the county there are several offices awaiting the official canvass to determine. On Sheriff the latest returns show Zwickey ahead with Cornelius a sharp second while Allen is not a thousand miles behind. Beaupre did not poll his party vote and naturally feels sore. "Before the war" there was rumors that one N. P. Johnson, had the "Independent" bee in his bonnet, or was intending to run or had "come out" or something of that sort. Well, maybe he did go in, if so he never came out, at least he has not been heard from and anxious friends think of advertising for news of his whereabouts. If anybody has heard from him they will relieve the anxiety of his "many friends" by communicating with them. Leo, for County Attorney, Montague, for Probate Judge and Patterson for Register seem to have "got there" fast enough while it is nip and tuck between Stevens and Hamery for surveyor with nip a huckle-berry ahead. The official canvass will tell the story.

About Ourself.

Our readers will notice the difference in THE JOURNAL this week and we have a few words to say in relation thereto. In the first place we will say that this change, rendered necessary by the hard times, we trust will be only temporary. Owing to the fact that subscriptions are coming in so slowly we are obliged to curtail expenses as far as possible and hence the change. If all of our readers who are in arrears on subscription will kindly call and settle or send in their dues we shall be enabled to resume our regular size at an early date, and right here we would urge each and every one to do so, as we, like other business men, must live and must have something substantial with which to do it. We have not been very importunate with our patrons in the past, in fact we have been so extremely lenient that some names appear on our list whose owners have never contributed one cent toward the expenses of THE JOURNAL. They have continued to read THE JOURNAL regularly at our expense. We attribute this fact more to carelessness than to a desire on their part to "sponge" their reading matter, therefore we take this method to call their attention to this matter and urge them to send in their little subscriptions. We wish to resume our full size by December 1st, and would like these subscription matters settled by that time which will enable us to do so. THE JOURNAL needs the assistance of each and every one of its friends this fall and awaits their response.

Watch the Flues.

A careful farmer's buildings should not burn unless set on fire by lightning. On the farm there are no fires for manufacturing purposes; fire cannot be communicated from one's neighbors; that class which furnishes incendiaries is lacking; and all household fires can be kept under the eye of the farmer and his family. The newspaper reports of the burning of farm buildings show that the fires can nearly always be traced to negligence, and in more than half the cases to faulty flues. The season is now at hand when all the occupied rooms will be heated, and the danger from defective flues is consequently great. Let there be no delay in examining all flues to make sure that they are perfectly safe. If any are found defective, repair them at once. The most dangerous place in a flue is the point where the pipe enters it. If the flue is not built from the floor up (a common way of constructing one,) this point is in the garret, and rarely noticed. Unless the pipe fits the opening very closely, sparks will escape, and falling upon the adjacent woodwork, made dry and combustible by the heat from the pipe and flue, will occasion a conflagration. At least twice every year the joints about where the pipe enters the flue, should by plastered, pressing the mortar firmly against the flue, and into the crevice between it and the pipe.—[American Agriculturist for November.

Duluth News: A very lively time was had on the board of trade Thursday in regard to making the Duluth & Western elevator E "regular," that is making the use of its wheat receipts on the board. The discussion was a long one and resulted in a tie vote, ten to ten, which, of course, is unfavorable to the house. Ever since this house was first put up it has met with a series of troubles, and although the company has done all in its power to remedy them, many members of the board seem to still think it unsafe. It has been braced in accordance with architects' recommendations, and what little wheat has been in it so far has been held all right. It is claimed by those against the house that it is too slow a shipper and that its position is unfortunate in more ways than one. The matter is not settled, however, by the action of the board Thursday, and it will undoubtedly come up again for final settlement. It is to be hoped that the difficulty can be remedied and the house made regular, as so large an investment as this house has been should not prove unremunerative and a positive loss to its stockholders. The News feels sure that the house will be regular in a short time.

The above item refers to what is known in this country as the Farmers Elevator Line and it does not show the true facts as we have been told them. The managers say that they have been fought desperately at every point by Millers' Association and this last blow was intended to destroy their credit at the banks thus driving them out of the market. The present elevator system claims to give competition but if they did that what objection could they have to another line coming into the field? The fact that there is no competition in the wheat market could not be more clearly proven than is done by every move they make. We trust that the News' belief that the Farmers Elevator will be made regular will prove true but we have our serious doubts about it if the Millers' Association and the Elevator companies can prevent it.

Lizzie Evans in Fogg's Ferry.

This famous and widely known actress will favor us with one night on her way to Winnepeg, in her great creation of Chip in Fogg's Ferry. Miss Evans has played in all the principle cities this season and will produce this famous play with all the original scenery as practiced in New York. The following is from the N. Y. World, May 20th, 1884.

Miss Evans is a consummate little actress—such a one as it is a real pleasure to see. She is clever and conscientious—two traits seldom blended—to the utmost. In stature small, in figure girlish and with features rather intelligent than handsome, she makes amends for every defect by the unflagging spirit of her playing and by her natural and spontaneous vivacity. It seems to be a fact that a stage hoyden, to be accepted as a favorite, must be burdened chiefly with the weight of years. Of those with whom Lizzie Evans would naturally be compared, she is ten years younger than Annie Pixley, twenty years younger than Lotta and thirty years younger than Maggie Mitchell. This is, with an audience, already a great advantage. But when to it is added a talent as fresh and bright as her years, the difference is certainly not to be deplored. Miss Evans is thoroughly natural in her ways and methods, and I do not wonder that she should have become at once a favorite in the various cities in which she has appeared. Her singing is not brilliant, but it is discreet. She does not lack art—she lacks voice. But so crisp and true is her acting that the audience readily forgets this. In pathetic scenes she is very good, and altogether I am glad to welcome to New York an actress who does not depend on anything but her ability for the gratifying success she has achieved.

TIGHT LACING.

The Absurdity of the Custom as well as Its Effects upon the Health of Slaves to the Fashion.

There would be no tight lacing if girls could be made to understand this simple fact:—that men dread the thought of marrying a woman who is subject to fits of irritable temper, to bad headaches, and other ailments we need not mention, all of which, everybody knows, are the direct and inevitable product of the compression of the waist; men like to see a small waist, certainly; but there is a great difference between the waist that is well formed and in proportion to the rest of the figure, and a waist which is obviously and artificially compressed, to the destruction of that easy and graceful carriage which is one of the chief charms of a woman's appearance. An unnaturally compressed waist is far more certain of detection than a mass of false hair or a faint dusting of powder. The rawest youth that enters a ball-room can pick out the women who have straitened themselves artificially.

If a young woman, to obtain the appearance of a dragon-fly, has been subjecting herself to considerable physical pain, and who has been laying up for herself a pretty store of ailments which only want time to pronounce themselves, could only see the stare of scarcely disguised contempt and understand the scornful pity which greets the result of her labor, we should have a change of fashion. Through all changes women remain true only to one fashion; whether her clothing is as long and lank as that of a Grecian Virgin, or whether she builds around the lower half of her figure a rotund and capacious structure of steel, she is ever faithful to the tradition of a small waist; and she will weaken her circulation, she will incur headache, she will crack her voice, and she will ruin her digestion, all to produce a malformation which wise men regard with pity and fools with derision.

That ladies can be fitted with a corset which will not compress the waist, but give support, health, and comfort to the body, and easy and graceful carriage to the appearance, has been fully demonstrated by the celebrated philanthropist Mme. Dean, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has lately patented a corset which is a combination of shoulder-brace and spine-supporting corset, and while combining the benefits of both, is extremely simplified into a first-class corset. They are specially constructed with two curved springs so as to fit exactly on and support the shoulder-blades and another spring to support the spine. Made of the very finest tempered clock-spring, thus creating a complete support for the spine and supplying a covering for the open space in the back, thereby protecting the spine from cold and giving a smoothness of fit to the back of the dress, making it a valuable and most necessary corset for general use. It has already received the highest commendations from the leading modistes, the fashionable dressmakers, and the most eminent physicians of the United States and Europe.

The Old Established Corset House of Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, New York, have been engaged to manufacture them, which is a guarantee that they will be made of the best material and workmanship. A reliable agent is wanted to introduce these goods in this county. For particulars see advertisement in another column.

From Bad to Worse.

St. Cloud Journal.

If the farmers were not already aroused beyond the limit at which patience ceased to be a virtue, they certainly have received sufficient occasion for their utmost indignation in the recent action of the railroad companies in instructing their local agents not to furnish cars to any private individuals for shipping grain, whether they wish to ship through an elevator or not. This is a defiance of law which is simply outrageous. Heretofore any shipper could get a car for his grain as soon as he could load it through an elevator, or if there was no elevator at the station cars were furnished to be loaded from wagons. The town of Haven, on the east side of the river, was in the late blissful condition, and has often been cited as showing what accommodating creatures the railroads would be were it not for the wicked elevator companies to which they are obligated. To illustrate the working of the new order we will cite a case. Mr. J. J. Sullivan, of Haven, has a farm one mile from Cable station. A steam thresher was to begin work on his crop Monday afternoon, and he supposing that of course that he could get cars as usual applied to Freight Agent Wright Monday morning for a car to be loaded on Tuesday, another Wednesday and another Thursday. Mr. Wright replied that he had received orders on Saturday to furnish no more cars to individual shippers. Mr. Sullivan will therefore have to store his wheat on his farm and hold it, hoping for better things, or haul it seven miles to the St. Cloud elevator, the nearest one buying, and sell it at 62 cents a bushel, if they choose to grade him No. 1 hard and give that price. If he could get cars to ship to Minneapolis he would have to pay 7 cents per bushel freight and one cent to the commission man; and he would get 80 cents a bushel on the market or 72 cents net, a clear gain of 10 cents a bushel over local prices. The railroad company could not complain of this; for its cars hold 400 to 600 bushels each, it takes a day to load and say another half day to get to market and unload? at 7 cents a bushel this at $28 to $42 rent per car for 36 hours use and hauling 60 miles. The question is, where does the extra ten cents per bushel, out of which the farmers are cheated, go? Does the railroad company and Millers' Association divide it between them? As a matter of fact, it has been found all along the line farmers have been taking cars and shipping direct to commission men in Minneapolis, and so making a grade and eight or ten cents per bushel, and the Millers' Association was not getting the wheat at its own price. To stop this the recent order is promulgated, which virtually forces the farmers who have not large granaries in which to store their grain or cannot afford to hold it and pay elevator charges, to sell to the Millers' Association through Pillsbury & Hulburt, at their grades and price. If a more shameless exercise of the powers of monopoly than this can be imagined, it is hoped it will not be suggested, as the railroad and elevator companies would doubtless seek to practice it.

Vote the Straight Ticket.

As a few of our friends did not follow the above most excellent advice of ours it now looks as though the straight Republican county ticket got slightually left on one or two points. At all events the results in three or four cases is so much in doubt that only the full returns upon the official count will decide it definitely. "Vote the straight ticket!"

Peterson's Magazine for December comes to us ahead of all others, a perfect marvel of beauty. There are more than a hundred pages of reading matter; two superb steel plates; a colored pattern, costlier even than a chromo; a colored fashion, double size, printed from steel; and more than half a hundred wood cuts of fashions, work patterns, etc. The stories are exceptionally good, though "Peterson" always has the very best. It is a standing wonder to us how this magazine can be furnished at its low price; it can only be explained by the enormous circulation which "Peterson" has had now for more than thirty years. We really suppose there are few families, at all pretending to refinement, in which this magazine is not to be found. It claims, and not undeservedly, to give more for the money—and of a better quality—than any other. The December number ends the year. Now, therefore, is the time to subscribe for 1885, or to get up clubs. We advise our fair readers to subscribe for no magazine till they have seen a copy of this. Specimens are sent gratis, if written for in good faith. The peice is but two dollars a year to single subscribers. To clubs, it is cheaper still, viz., Four copies for six dollars and a half, with an extra copy of the magazine as a premium to the person getting up the club. Or five copies for eight dollars, with both an extra copy of the magazine for getting up the club, and also a superb illustrated book of American poets, called "The Pearl of Price," or a large size steel engraving, for framing, "The Lion in Love." No other mrgazine gives such costly premiums. For lerget clubs, the price is still lower, while even more premiums rre given. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Cheatnut Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED—In every town, city and county, an intelligent, energetic lady of good address and some business ability, to introduce to the trade and consumers, Madame Dean's Celebrated Spinal Supporting Corset. Splendidly advertised; highly recommended by the leading Modiste's, the Fashionable Dressmakers, and the most eminent Physicians of the United States and Europe. Liberal pay. Agents are making $16 to $35 weekly. Address

TO THE FARMERS OF MINNESOTA!

At the request of the State Board of Collective Exhibits for Minnesota, and with the sanction of the Board of Regents of the State University, I have undertaken the supervision of the collection and display of the farm products of the State of Minnesota, for the approaching "World's Exposition" at New Orleans; and I confidently appeal to the public spirit, local pride and patriotism of the farmers of the State, to make this display of their productions alike—an honor to their calling and locality. The time left for completing this collection is very short but by united and energetic efforts it can be accomplished.

It is proposed to arrange the products of the State by counties, as far as possible, giving specimens of soils, woods, grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables, with statistics of population, wealth and productions, and illustrated with maps, charts, plats of towns and photographs of public buildings, manufacturing establishments and private residences. Liberal contributions of all objects to aid in this work are earnestly requested. For the guidance of collectors and contributors the following detailed instructions are furnished:

TIME ALLOTED FOR COLLECTION.

All articles must be shipped from point of collection on or before Nov. 10th, as the trains of cars conveying Minnesota's exhibit to New Orleans, will leave Minneapolis and St. Paul promptly Nov. 15th, 1884.

DIRECTIONS FOR SHIPPING.

The transportation companies of the State have generously offered to carry all articles designed for exhibition, to Minneapolis and St. Paul, and from thence to Chicago free of charge. Ship all articles, securely packed in clean, tight boxes or barrels, well nailed and plainly directed thus: "Articles for Exhibition at the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exhibition, New Orleans. Collective Exhibits of Minnesota. Consigned to Oliver Gibbs, Jr., U. S. Commissioner, care of Prof. E. D. Porter, Supt. of Agricultural Exhibits. To be stored by the Union Railway Storage Co., Minneapolis, Minn." Shipping cards and tags containing full directions will be furnished on application. A letter should be sent, stating the day of shipment, by what route, name and address of collectors, contributors, and list of articles forwarded, with bill for any expenses incurred, which will be paid upon presentation.

ARTICLES DESIRED FOR EXHIBITION.

Grains—Such as wheat, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, flax, hemp and wild rice, to be the best of their kind, well cleaned, put up in quantities of one bushel of each variety, in clean sound bags, well tied, labelled with the name of the variety and address of the grower or contributor.

Grasses—To be collected when possible, of full length including the roots, tied in bundles of about three inches in diameter, two bands at least, and packed in boxes in such a manner as to keep them straight. Grass seeds of all varieties, amber cane, broom corn, beans, peas, and vetches in quantities of four quarts or more, if possible, can be put up in paper bags and packed in boxes.

Indian Corn—Is desired of all varieties, in stalk, husk and shelled—ten stalks of each variety, tied with three bands in such a manner as to preserve both leaves and ears. Fifty ears of each variety with the husks left on and one bushel of each variety of shelled corn, well cleaned and the tips and butts removed from the ear before shelling so as to secure the best formed grains.

Vegetables—Such as potatoes, beets, carrots, parsnips, turnips, ruta-bagas, kohl-rabi, horse-radish and artichokes, and any other roots, should be secured in quantities of not less than one bushel of each variety, securely placed in boxes or barrels with alternate layers of damp (not wet) moss, from tamarack swamps, and so firmly packed that they will not get bruised in handling. These roots should not be washed, but have all dirt carefully removed with a brush, so as not to break the skin. Onions should be well dried in the sun and packed in slated crates or boxes so as allow a free circulation of air. Pumpkins and squashes can be shipped in barrels or boxes, well packed in dry shelled oats. Cabbage and cauliflower should be left with the roots and leaves on, pulled one day before packing, turned heads downward to drain, dry and wilt, and packed in open slatted boxes.

Wool—In fleece, flax, hemp and silk, both raw and spun, as well as the seeds of our native forest trees are very desirable.

Miscellaneous articles—Such as preserved and canned fruits and vegetables, domestic wines, vinegar, syrups, strained honey, pickles, catsups, and all articles contained in glass or earthenware, can be shipped in boxes, packed in oats. Honey in the comb can be sent in boxes as prepared for market.

Paintings, drawings and photographs of public buildings, private residences and manufacturing establishments are very desirable, as also objects of interest and curiosity, such as Indian relics, skins, skeletons and horns of wild animals, minerals, shells and petrifactions and objects representing pioneer life.

All articles contributed will be well cared for, and safely returned when requested, free of expense. They will be exhibited with the name and address of the owner attached, and full credit given in the official report published by the State at the close of the Exposition.

Premiums, amounting to one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) have been offered in the Department of Agriculture by the Director General of the Exposition, and farmers of Minnesota wishing to compete, can do so without expense, by sending their products to me, as directed above. Premium lists, containing full information, will be promptly furnished on application.

Every citizen of the State is most cordially invited to assist in this work; and, as the time is short, united and immediate effort will be required to enable Minnesota to make an exhibit of agricultural products, worthy of her fame and resources.

EDWARD D. PORTER,
Supt. of Agricultural Exhibits.

HULBERTON, Nov. 3d, 1884.

ED. POLK COUNTY JOURNAL:—I left Crookston with my family about Sept. 8th, and was whirled along over the prairie with Conductor Nolan to Barnesville with more than usual speed for we were late leaving Crookston. We took a square meal at Barnesville, and not many moments after we were all pounding our ears in good shape. Morning found us at Minneapolis fresh and in good spirits. We stopped at St. Paul until evening, spending the day with my brother. At 9 o'clock p. m., we boarded the east bound train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, and again forgot the rumbling of the cars and the screaching whistle of the engine in profound slumber. Morning came again, as beautiful a morning, I think, as ever broke. Perhaps it was the sight of the grand old hills, the orchards and the forests, that I had missed so long, perhaps it was the autumn leaves which adorned natures dress with so much loveliness. Whatever it was, to me it was one of the most beautiful mornings I had ever witnessed. Two hours in Chicago and then over the M. C. and C. S. to Niagara Falls and Suspension bridge. Then over the N. Y. C to my childhood home in western N. Y. All along the line it was a succession of beautiful scenes. The old farm houses in a wilderness of shade, the ample barns, the apple trees laden with fruit, the rich clusters of grapes hanging temptingly upon the vines, the familiar fences and the cattle grazing quietly and contentedly in the fields, were pictures familiar, but newly garnished from long absense. I remained at my old home in western New York about eight days, visiting old friends and familiar scenes. The past was plainly brought to mind and I wished that again I might live it over. The changes that have taken place, not in the appearance of the country but in the people, are a source of sorrow. The older people have passed to their eternal abiding place, the younger have taken wives and husbands, and are scattered over the earth, but I cannot dwell here. Farmers are rejoicing over a good crop but prices are poor. It would do you good to go over this section of country and look at the apple orchards. My father has about 12 acres of orchard, and this year will yield him about 800 barrels of good saleable fruit, at $1.50 cents per barrel. This is a small orchard compared to some in this section. It is not uncommon to see 50 acres of apple orchard and some are 200 acre orchards. Again I take the N. Y. C. visiting for a day one of the finest inland cities on this continent, Rochester, N. Y. The city has changed for the better since ten years ago; one feature being the elevation of the N. Y. C. R. R. through the city, and the erection of a large and beautiful depot. I took a look at Genesee Falls. The jagged perpendicular rocks are there, but the water is being used to feed the Erie Canal and the mills and machine shops of the city, only meager drippings reach the basin below, and the bare dry rock stands as if in slumber wanting only its co-worker, the rising tide, to arouse it into angry life. Again the iron horse bears me eastward through Albany, over the Boston & Albany road to Springfield, Mass. Here I remained three days. I do not know how to describe this beautiful city, I could not do it justice. Its many suburban towns so close that they seem children under the protection of a parent. Its many and great manufactures, its beautiful drives, its grand old elms, its ancient cemeteries, the dark blue waters of the Connecticut rolling through it. Mt. Tom, with his bald and blackened head in the distance standing as a grim sentinel over the quiet cities, and its close connection with the great commercial marts of the world, make it one of the most lovely and desirable cities to live in in the United States. On through cities, around curves, over hills and through rocks to Boston. I shall not attempt to tell you of Boston, it would take too long, it is unlike any city I was ever in, it is the only city in which I lost all points of compass, the only one in which I never knew whether I was going to or from a given point. It is THE hub in truth. It is one of the great eastern gates which opens out upon the broad Atlantic and the old world. It is rife with busiest life. It is the city where was struck the blow that crushed the yoke of tyrrany and lit the torch of liberty. Her hills bear the scars of that battle yet. The effects of the pickaxe and spade in hands of the patriots are still visable and a monument perpetuating the memory of the strugglers for home and liberty rears itself high toward heaven on old Bunker Hill. In a word Boston is renowned and grand and I love her. We were a band of railway conductors who met here, and I should condemn myself if I did not mention the courtesy extended us while in this city. The mayor of the city offered or invited us to an excursion on the harbor and ocean, in the city's steamer, a sumptuous meal was spread and all who could get away from the business which took us to this eastern city, went together with the ladies of the party and enjoyed themselves thoroughly. Thanks to Boston's generous mayor. The Boston theatre, the Boston Bijou theatre, the Globe theatre and the Park theatre extended invitations to all who wished to attend. These theatres are first-class in every respect and lovers of instruction and amusement who may visit Boston should not loose an opportunity to attend. The railways throughout the country were very kind extending free transportation to ourselves and wives over their respective lines, and especially courteous were the Old Colony Railway and also the Boston & Maine. The latter gave excursions to Portland, Maine, I think the most enjoyable trip I ever experienced was Boston to Plymouth and return on the Old Colony road. There were some three hundred of us and every one was delighted. The day was a fine one and the ride along the shore of the Massachusetts bay, with the blue waters on one side and the hills and valleys on the other was indeed lovely. We passed the Miles Standish monument which overlooks sea and land, we soon pulled up at Plymouth. The mayor of this city met us at the depot and conducted us through the streets to the monument of Faith, erected by the Plymouth Memorial Society. Upon one side is the following: "National monument to the forefathers, erected by a grateful people in remembrance of their labors, sacrifices and sufferings, for the cause of civil and religious liberty." On two sides are the names of the passengers of the May Flower. In bronze encased in the granite rock which stands upon the surface is a representation of the forefathers leaving their old home. On the opposite side is the landing of the pilgrims. On the top of the structure stands a statue of Faith, 36 feet in height. From here we went to Memorial hall. This building contains the old relics of the pilgrims, oil paintings, etc. It is where the society meets and transacts its business. This society was founded in 1821 I think, and this was the first time this hall was opened upon Sunday. We considered it the greatest courtesy that could have been extended. In Memorial hall yard is a granite erected with the compact of the pilgrims, made and signed in the May Flower cabin. This is a portion of it: "In ye name of God Amen. We whose names are underwritten, ye loyal subjects of our dread Sovereign Lord and King, defenders of the faith, etc., having undertaken for ye glory of God advancement of ye christian faith and honor of our king and countrie a voiage to plant ye first colone in ye northern parts of Virginia, doe by these presents solemny and mutually in ye presence of God and one of another, covenant and combine ourselves together, into a civil body politic, for our better ordering and preservation and furtherance of ye ends aforesaid and by virtue hereof to enact, constitute and frame such just and equal laws, etc., etc." I did not have the time to copy further, but this will show the character of the compact and the style of spelling. From Memorial hall we went to the court house and looked over the first and oldest deeds of this country.

Now we are led to the cemetery of our forefathers. This is on a high hill overlooking the bay, and away off to the east lies Cape Cod, which is just visible to the eye. Here in this burial place was the first fort or barricade to protect themselves from Indians. Massasoit was then the Chief of the tribes of this country, and with him the Pilgrims smoked the pipe of peace on the opposite hill. This compact of the pipe was kept until years after when King Philip, a son of Massasoit, waged war on the colonies. This war was known as the King Philip war. In this resting place of the dead are some stones which have stood for more than two centuries. I am not geologist enough to tell the age or kind of stone used, but some look like common brown sandstone, while others are slate. The stones have been so worn by time that the lettering has become defaced. Here is an inscription which I copied from one not quite so ancient. "Here lies interred the body of Hannah Simmes, who at the early period of 23 years, after living long exercised with bodily pain, with Christian fortitude yielded her spirit to its benevolent author, Jan. 30th, 1766." Many more similar to the above may be found, and I was greatly interested in reading them. With careful tread we approach the last resting place of these, our ancestors; with equally silent step we leave them. Peace be to their ashes and may the nation live to protect this sacred spot. It is meet that they rest under the soil for which they struggled so hard against the most terrible privations, as well as a savage and relentless foe. Truly a great nation owes the most, if not all, of its existence to their perseverence and daring. The spirit of freedom as she passes over the earth should muffle her wings in respect. Science should shed a tear of gratitude upon their graces, and living millions of men and women thank God that through them they enjoy the right to worship God according as their conscience shall dictate. Now we go down the hill to the shore and here I put my hand upon the rock upon which the tired seaworn pilgrims sat to rest. This rock is a boulder weighing about two tons, as near as I could guess. It was about twice the size, so I am told, but curiosity seekers have carried away pieces in their pockets until the Memorial Society enclosed it so that none can destroy it. Back to Boston, then by the Fall River route to New York, the journey from Fall River being made by steamer to Newport, thence to New York City. While just outside Narragansett Bay the waves rolled quite high. It was grand and I thought of Byron and his words:

> "Roll on thou dark and deep blue ocean, roll,
> Ten thousand fleets sweep o'er thee in vain,
> Man marks the earth with ruin,
> His control stops with thy shore."

But I am weary. The N. Y. C. to Orleans Co. finishes my trip thus far,

Yours truly,

J. B. COPELAND.

A Great Newspaper.

The Pall Mall Gazette, of London, England, did not overstate the case when it said that The New York Independent is "one of the ablest weeklies in existence." It is as overwhelming as a monthly or quarterly magazine, with all the matter in its many departments. Any monthly might indeed be proud if it could show as distinguished a list of contributors as The Independent. In a single department—its story department—we find, among Englishmen, such contributors as Sir Samuel W. Baker, the celebrated Egyptian explorer; Thomas Hardy, W. E. Norris, James Payn, F. W. Robinson and Henry W. Lucy, the well-known and deservedly popular novelists; while among Americans we notice the names of Edward Everett Hale, Frank R Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Sarah O. Jewett, J. S., of Dale, Rebecca Harding Davis and Harriet Prescott Spofford. The Independent printed also, recently, the last story from the pen of the late Ivan Tourgeneff, having secured the only translation from the Russian into English. This department is but a sample of the others. It would seem to us that The Independent offers not only "fifty-two dividend, during the year," but, in addition, a stock dividend with each departme. We advise our readers to send for a free sample copy.

Profit of Stock Raising.

Globe: The papers are all encouraging farmers to give more attention to stock raising. The Review in Grant County gives this instance to show that it can be made to pay with small means: "Joe Foreman, Osceola Tp., who settled in Grant County five years ago and went to farming, was a caller at the Review Tuesday. Two years ago last spring he had $220 in money, one cow and a yearling calf, and a team of horses. He invested his money in twenty head of young cattle and has since devoted his time to stock. Since then he has sold stock to the amount of $880, and has left four cows, one thoroughbred short-horn Durham bull, two ponies and one colt. This demonstrates very conclusively how stock can be made to pay in Grant County on a very small capital."

Buffalo County (Wis.) Journal: George Warninger, of Ada, Minn., moved his family and household effects to this place last week, and will remain with us until spring. Mr. Warninger is a young man and has made money in the new west.

Everybdy is plowing with prospects good for being able to finish in good shape.

Wheat is wonderfully and fearfully low just now but reports show a livening up in the eastern markets. It may effects us here and it may not.

Who says this is a cold country? Think of farmers leaving their plows to come to the races to-day, this 13th day of November, on the race course? That's what they are doing.

If farmers are wise they will sow just as little wheat next year as possible. If there is the volume of wheat in sight that is reported and everybody raises as much next year as this wheat will bring next to nothing at all. When great manufactories have glutted the markets they wisely shut down awhile and farmers would be wise to follow their example. Better summer fallow one-half the land and let it rest than repeat the experience of this fall.

FARM NOTES.

Farmers Tribune.

COTSWOLDS.

We hear the best results from this herd of sheep in the Northwest. Their hardiness, combined with a heavy yield of wool and large mutton product, have made them a favorite with the farmers in the great valley of the Mississippi. The season of the year is at hand when flock masters should be looking out for pure blooded males to run with their flocks. We were gratified to learn recently that R. C. Judson, Esq., of Farmington, Dakota County, Minnesota, the popular Secretary of the State Agricultural Society, had a few fine Cotswold bucks, which he will sell at reasonable prices. He was fortunate in obtaining from George Harding, the Secretary of the National Cotswold Association, one of the best bucks on this continent. Mr. Judson is doing a grand work for the farmers of the Northwest in breeding such splendid flocks of sheep.

NO MONEY IN IT.

There is no money in keeping hogs that are intended to be made into pork in the fall of the year in this part of the country until Christmas or the fore part of January. It is a good deal better that they should be fattened early so that they can be butchered early in the season. Take one year with another, farmers should have their hogs all killed by the 10th of December. There is little profit in keeping them after that time, counting the extra food and care required along when cold weather comes, with the extra weight made during the time, there will not be much profit left for the farmer. When the weather is cold and disagreeable there is not much that is desirable in the North in fattening hogs. Better to save the time and food the animals necessarilly require for some other purpose.

THE RESULT.

The result of the election is yet in doubt, depending on New York. Out of sixty counties comprising the State, thirty-three have shown a slight gain for Cleveland over the figures first reported. No frauds have thus far been unearthed and it begins to look like those who have bet on Blaine's election will have to stand the racket as best they may.

Defeated but not Cast Down.

We are busted. We have met the enemy and we—are his'n. That is part of us is busted. Part of that part which was the "late lamented" Republican County ticket. We have lost a portion of which therefore THE JOURNAL, which is the oldest (our modesty forbids us to add "and best") paper in Polk County is for sail. Anybody who thinks he can run it better and more successfully can try his hand at "sail"-ing the craft for just Two Thousand and Five Hundred Dollars MORE than we would have taken before the election. We mean business. Don't all come at once!

You Republican fellers! you ought to have your nex 'rung for letting them low-down Cleveland fellers get away with Jas. G. Blaine, (if they have.) If you have been and gone and done that we will sell THE JOURNAL to the first man who will give us two thousand five hundred dollars more for it than we held it at before the election. So there now!

WITH HER DEAD CHILD.

MRS. GARDNER'S TRIPLE CRIME.

She Kills Her Husband and Baby and Then Attempts Self-Destruction—Domestic Troubles is Supposed to Have Unsettled Her Mind.

Chicago News Nov. 7th.

A woman with bloody hands, carrying a dead baby in her arms, rushed across Laflin Street yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock and rang the door-bell of Mrs. Kennedy's residence, No. 17. When that lady came to the door the woman with the bloody hands cried out: "Oh, Mrs. Kennedy, there is something wrong with my baby! It gasps so!" She held the little one up, and blood oozed from its white forehead. "Why, Mrs. Gardner, your baby's dead!" cried Mrs. Kennedy, seizing the lifeless child. Mrs. Gardner looked about her blankly for a moment, then with a piercing scream she rushed across the floor to one of the front windows. "Come across the street," she cried; "I have killed my husband." Then she fled out of the house and across the street to No. 16. Just inside the hall door, lying with his head in a pool of blood on the floor, and his feet on the lower steps of the stairs, was the inanimate form of Dr. Schuyler Gardner. His wife leaned over him, wrung her hands, and cried: "Come back! come back!" Then she went up-stairs, carrying her dead baby.

A moment before this Mrs. Baker, who occupies the first floor of the house, heard a fall, and on going into the hall found the dead man. She ran out and called Mr. Behrens, the druggist at the corner of Madison Street and Ogden Avenue. He called the patrol wagon. Two officers came and removed the dead man. He had a bullet wound in the left temple and another on the right side of his head. When the officers went up-stairs they found Mrs. Gardner sitting in a chair, perfectly crazed, while the unfortunate baby lay in the cradle, dead. Mrs. Gardner was shot behind the left ear. She was removed to the county hospital. Her injuries are thought to be of a fatal character.

The house at 16 Laflin Street is a three-story brick, and stands in a row on the west side of the street. It was rented some three months ago to Dr. Schuyler Gardner, a magnetic physician. The family consisted of his wife, Della M. Gardner, a 15-months-old daughter, and Mrs. Gardner, the wife's mother. The doctor was a fine-looking man of 44 years of age, and the wife a lady-like brunette about 28. They were first cousins, and had been married eight years ago in Jefferson County, New York. The mother-in-law had lived with them about six years. Previous to living on Laflin Street they had resided on Ogden Avenue, and the doctor had rented half a store at 532 Madison Street, now used as a restaurant by Mr. Stone. The couple seemed to have lived happily till about a year ago, when the doctor lost some money, and became rather crabbed in his manner and complained of his wife's behavior. All the friends say that there was not the slightest ground for the doctor's complaints, but it seemed to prey very much on Mrs. Gardner, who told her friends that it nearly drove her crazy, as she was wrapped up in her husband and child. The Gardners occupied the second floor of the house, the first being rented to Mrs. Baker and the third story let out to roomers.

Mrs. Gardner, the mother-in-law, says she was in the back room preparing food for the baby when she heard two shots fired. She stepped out into the hall and saw Dr. Gardner lying at the foot of the stairs. She ran into the front room, where she saw her daughter sitting on a chair and the baby lying in the opposite corner. Her daughter said: "Oh, mother, what's the matter with my baby? It's gasping for breath!" Before she could do anything the unfortunate woman had rushed across the room, seized the baby, and run down stairs and out in the streets. The old lady said she had lived with Dr. Gardner and his wife six years, and the doctor had always treated her with the greatest kindness, and petted his wife like a baby. Recently he had had some financial troubles, and this had caused him to find fault with his wife, for which he had no cause. Her daughter was greatly worried at it, and had frequently told her it would drive her crazy. Yesterday the doctor had said he was going away to Rock Falls, and he refused to say whether he was coming back or not. His trunk had been sent on, and he had bidden her good-by before she heard the shooting. Her daughter had pleaded with the doctor not to leave her, and she was sure his refusals to listen to her had driven her out of her mind.

Under the sofa in Mrs. Gardner's room was found the pistol lying in a box with the cover off. It is a small "blue jacket" seven-shooter, 22-caliber, and six chambers were discharged. Dr. Gardner and his family were in the habit of taking their meals at Stone's restaurant, and Mr. and Mrs. Stone say that the doctor was in there about 1 o'clock, apparently cheerful. Mrs. Gardner was in about two hours before the shooting. She was friendly with Mrs. Stone, and that lady says she has acted strangely for some time. As she was leaving yesterday afternoon Mrs. Stone asked after the baby, when Mrs. Gardner said she thought her heart would break, and burst out crying. Every one in the neighborhood speaks in the highest terms of Mrs. Gardner as a most kind-hearted lady.

The above terrible item evidently refers to a gentleman and his wife, former residents of Wadena, Minn., Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Gardner. Mr. G. was one of the first settlers in Wadena County, where he lived until within a few years, when he removed to Chicago, and invested his means in a plow factory. The last news we had from him he had lost largely by this venture and this seems to have been the terrible result. Mr. Gardner was well known along the N. P. railroad, he having established cheese factories at Glyndon and Audubon and been engaged in business of various kinds for several years. The News describes Mr. and Mrs. G. perfectly with the exception of the doctor part. Mr G. must have taken that up after his failure in the plow works. The Chicago Daily News of the 10th gives the following additional particulars:

"At the inquest on the dead bodies of Dr. Schuyler S. Gardner and his infant daughter, Jennie Pearl, which was held on Saturday at Adam's undertaking establishment, on Madison Street, Mrs. Sara Gardner, mother of Mrs. Della Gardner, testified to the circumstances of the shooting, of which she was an eye-witness. She said that her daughter had not appeared in her right mind for some time. Dr. Gardner, she said, was about to leave Chicago for Rock Falls, and had not told his wife when he would return. Mrs Gardner was frantic with fear lest she should be deserted by her husband. Mrs. R. E. Kennedy also testified before the coroner's jury. The verdict recommended that Mrs. Della Gardner be held to the grand jury for the shooting, and that she be also examined for insanity by the proper authorities. The woman who killed her husband and her child and then tried to kill herself recovered consciousness at the county hospital Saturday. The physicians in charge of her say that she will recover, from her wound in a few weeks with proper care."

Collapse of English Wheat Growing.

Farmers Tribune.

The Tribune has, with some persistency, endeavored to show that the low price of wheat, far from being a permanent blow to the Northwest, is in reality a blessing in very thin disguise. Low prices like the present mean that the cheaper and newer lands, and the lands not equally well adapted for the production of other commodities, are to become continually larger sources of the world's supply. The world must and will have wheat, and it cannot have it, unless under temporary and unusual circumstances, without paying a good profit above the cost of production. But in the older countries, and in the older portion of this country, wheat is henceforth to be a crop which cannot be grown with profit, or which will be much less profitable than other crops for which the soil is as well or even better adapted. The immediate consequence is to be seen in the reduction of acreage, and this will have its most marked beginning in England. The average cost in England of raising a bushel of wheat is given by so high an authority as the London Economist as follows:

Rent, taxes, etc.,	$10 00
Carting and spreading manure	2 50
Plowing, drilling and harrowing,	3 75
Seed, including preparation,	2 50
Keeping rooks off,	50
Hoeing and weeding,	2 50
Harvesting and thatching,	5 00
Threshing and carting out,	2 50
Wear and tear of implements,	75
Interest on capital, expenses, etc.,	5 00
Manure,	5 00
Total expenses,	$40 00
Receipts—Four quarters at $7.50 each,	30 00
Loss per acre,	$10 00

From this it appears that the English wheat-grower who sells his product on this fall's market loses 25 per cent., or $10 per acre. And were it not for the high average yield of England—more than thirty bushels to the acre—the loss, of course, would be much greater. The farmer of Minnesota or Dakota can produce an acre of wheat at a total cost of from $6 to $8 an acre. Right in these figures lies the reason for firm faith in the future of the Northwest. England is about to retire from wheat growing, and her demands for foreign breadstuffs will be doubled within a decade. Meat, poultry, fruit and vegetables will be the future products of British farms. England is destined to become a great market garden. The transition must inevitably have come; but it has been precipitated by this year's phenomenal prices. No part of the world is so advantageously situated for a command of the future wheat market of Europe as the northwestern portion of the United States.

Warm Pig Pens.

This is not a great pork producing State. We do not know that it ever will be, but for all that, pork can be raised in Minnesota in a profitable manner. For that matter it is now. There is one thing the farmers do not have to contend with in raising hogs here, and that is the fatal disease so common to them further south. This is a healthy country for them, and farmers can and do if they have proper conveniences, make a good deal of money from keeping swine. It is useless to expect much in this particular unless they have these conveniences, the greatest of which is warm pens for them during our winter months. The extreme cold has a wonderful way of reducing the flesh from the form of a shoat. Hogs that are fat enough for the butcher, will in a few days during our cold weather, if kept in cold quarters, shiver all the flesh off of them, under such circumstances they will consume enormous quantities of food without taking on any flesh, but will be losing it all the time. If retained in warm pens it will be just the reverse. The great economy in keeping old hogs, shoats, or young pigs in Minnesota, and in all other cold countries is to keep them warm during winter. The wind and snow should never be permitted to reach them. If the beds are dry and filled with plenty of good straw, they can, if in good condition and properly fed, stand a certain amount of frost without losing much flesh, if too, beyond the reach of the cold wind and snow.

Reflections of Markham, the Shoeman.

How much a man is like his shoes
For instance both the sole may lose,
Both have been tanned
And both made tight by cobblers.
Both get left and right,
Both need a mate to be complete,
And both are made to go on feet,
Both need heeling—o'ft are sold,
And both in time turn all to mould.
With shoes the first is last,
With man the last shall be first,
And when—the shoes wear out
They are mended new,
When men wear out
They are mended too.
Both have their ties,
And both inclined
When polished, in the world to shine.
Markham's shoes are soled so fast,
And why—because they always last.
Both men and shoes in time peg out.
Which would you choose,
To be a man—or be his shoes?

Woodside Wonders.

One of the greatest wonders here is that when No. 1 hard wheat is only worth 49 in Crookston, that flour, No. 1, is worth $3.25 per hundred, the same price as when wheat was 95 cents. But of course we of the rural districts are not supposed to be great mathematicians, but we do know that 11 in 10 won't go. We wonder how hard working farmers can make out a balance sheet the first of January, 1885, and pay $2 per day for harvesting and threshing hands and sell wheat at 50 cents per bushel?—11 into 10. We wonder how long the farmers can stand that kind of stealing? We wonder if there are now in existence on the globe any honest railroad companies or millers? We wonder if the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad company are Republicans or Democrats? We wonder why the editor of THE JOURNAL does not come out to Woodside? But wonders will never cease, so we will notice some of the items of interest. Our mail service has been changed lately, so that we get two mails a week direct from Crookston, so that we cannot plead ignorance any longer. Our one legged Chippewa mail carrier is as accommodating as if he were running for Congress, and as regular as the sun, as gentlemanig as any man in office, high or low. Uncle Daniel Cameron was here on Saturday, the 1st inst., looking after his saw mill interests. Mr. George Goodrich took a trip to Fosston last week to look at the new road. Mr. F. Redlon has gone to Minneapolis and left his little log cabin on the claim. Miss Helen Stoddard has just returned after a year's absence.

Cost of Wheat Production.

Fargo Argus: The Chicago Tribune discusses a length the cost of raising a bushel of wheat in the various wheat sections. The question is one it believes to be of very great practical importance, if as generally conceded, the production of the great staple has outgrown the demand. The process of readjusting the conditions to the new phase is naturally a slow one and entered upon reluctantly by farmers. In England the cost of production is put at $35 an acre, while the product at the prices this year was worth but $25. This involves the loss of $10 an acre and of course will compel the growth of substitutes for wheat, unless there is an early advance that would seem to be permanent. The information received by the Tribune from the wheat districts in the States is that the cost of an acre in wheat is from $9 to $10. At a yield of fifteen bushels per acre the return is below the cost. The farmer cannot afford to continue the process. He must reduce the wheat average and find something to take the place.

Wheat Prices.

Minneapolis Tribune: There is one thing that the present low price of wheat will accomplish, and that is—a diversified industry. There is another thing it will do and that is—it will enable the poorest people in the land to have all the wheat flour they want. When we were a boy we had little acquaintance with bread made from wheat flour; corn bread, rye and Indian bread was the great staple. The latter was not bad to eat. We have wished a thousand times for it since we left the old homestead. Rye bread was used to a greater or less extent, but to-day no one hears of it. We believe wheat is so cheap that wheat flour all over the country will become into general use, which will have a tendency to prevent the prices from getting lower. For instance an agricultural paper remarks:

"It may sound strange to most people in this country to say that wheat bread is not an article of diet the world over, but such is the fact nevertheless. The poverty which exists in foreign countries blest by the rule of kings and aristocrats is something that would appal could it be appreciated. The bill of fare on the tables of the peasantry of such civilized nations as France, Italy, Spain, Germany, Russia and other European counties, is something well nigh incomprehensible to our working classes, while as to Africa and Asiatic races there is a lower class still. Such bread as we see daily would be a surprising novelty as well as a luxury in their experience with food. But with every drop in the price of wheat and every advance in the means for growing it cheaply the lot of these people will be rendered happier. There are other ways also to do this when real statemanship rules the world; but there is a little consolation to the farmer at least to think that cheap wheat is a boon to the poor, and that, indirectly at least, the cheap wheat he is growing is doing something to advance human comfort and to create a permanent demand for it in buarters where before customers have been few."

FARM NOTES.

Farmers Tribune.

NO DANGER.

There may be an over production of wheat, oats and corn, but there is no danger of an overproduction of beef. The inhabitants of this country are too fond of it to ever permit that being the case. The laboring people in all pursuits of life are used to having all the meat they want, and the probabilities are that the demand for meat will increase instead of decreasing. Texas and the western territories cannot begin to supply the demand, and the great western states must help in the good work. This can be done without interfering with the dairy interests, usually the best dairy animals have a combination of beef qualities in their make up. We do not believe in breeding cattle especially in the interests of the dairy, but it is better to breed in the interest of both dairy and beef.

IT SHOULD BE UNDERSTOOD

That a small flock of sheep are always profitable on the farm. Another thing in relation to sheep should be understood, and that is it requires less capital to stock a farm with sheep than with any other animals. This is the saying of that excellent paper, the Massachusetts Ploughman, which can be truly called the farmer's friend. Experience by the flock masters in the West has proven that no part of husbandry pays so well as sheep. The only drawback to this industry is dogs, but the time is at hand when it is demonstrated that dogs are not so profitable as sheep, and we do not believe that farmers will decide against their own interests in this particular.

THE CONDITION OF THE STOCK.

Never in the history of the State has stock of every description been in such good condition to enter the winter months as it is this fall. We suppose that the same is the case in all the Western States and Territories. We are not quite sure that there are as many head of young neat cattle in Minnesota, as usual, because the farmers sold out extensively and closely last spring and early summer to Montana dealers, but there are a good many beef cattle for sale this fall. Those that are to be wintered are in such condition, and hay and fodder so very abundant, we may expect a good report in regard to stock next spring.

COWS LEAKING MILK.

Many cows have this trouble when in full flow of milk. The following practical suggestion may afford a preventive in many cases. Take a rubber ring, place in the center of the teat after you are done milking. Keep it on all the time until she begins to dry up in milk, and it will cure the trouble.

WATER FOR STOCK.

The farmer who made a single pump furnish water through rubber tubing to the stock in four fields did a very ingenious and wise thing. Animals should be able to obtain drink whenever they feel thirsty. The water then taken has a better effect than if given at convenient intervals by the farmer or his assistants, for in the latter case the animal is very apt to drink more than is really good for him. Then, again, if the attendant is concerned at all about the quantity of water the animal takes, the chances are he will pull him away before the demands of nature have been satisfied. For a small outlay of money farmers can, in a multitude of cases, arrange the water supply of their live stock so that they can drink whenever they feel dry. Such a method is economy in a double sense—in the well being of the stock and in the time of the owner or his help.

FEEDING STRAW.

Says Col. Curtis: A dry cow, fed on straw with two quarts of corn meal daily, will do as well as if fed on hay alone. In this locality the price of corn meal does not much exceed, per ton, the price of hay. The manure made from such feeding is, I think, fully equal in value to that made from hay. When bran is fed double the quantity should be given—four quarts instead of two of corn meal—and the manure, in my judgment, would be equally valuable. A steer could be well wintered on two to four quarts of meal per day, according to his size, using straw as supplementary food, and grain all the time. Two quarts of meal would weigh about two pounds, which at $20 a ton for the meal, would make a cost of 2 cents a day or $3 for five months. These figures would bear doubling in the price of corn meal, and then make it profitable to winter stock with corn meal and straw, and decidedly so against the price of throwing the straw away.

EARLY MATURITY.

Prof. Sanborn Dean, of the Agricultural College at Columbia, Missouri, said in a recent address: "Early maturity for meat product is essential to fullest success. I have from personal experience abundant data showing that the law is, that the older and larger an animal the more food it requires to make a pound of growth. This law is as immutable as those that hold the spheres in their courses. It has been said to me that it is cheaper to make a pound of growth on an 18-months-old pig than in a younger one. That man who keeps a pig beyond eight months makes pork at a greater cost than necessary. Of this there is no question. Feeding is a science. Not as a teacher, but as a practical farmer, I owe my conviction that no practical discussion could be made without using the discoveries and terms brought out by the experiment stations in Europe and some efforts in America. The subject is too full to now enter into. I have for seven successive years devoted special feeding trials to this matter, asking the honest steer for his answer, and not theorists. The steer will not lie. I wish to say one thing in this connection of food combinations. The State produces 8,000,000 tons of corn fodder and between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 tons of wheat straw. I will, under bonds, at present prices of beef, agree to realize $4 to $8 per ton for these fodders when rightly fed. As Col. Sellers expressed it regarding his eye water, "there is millions in it;" for at least two thirds of the fodder is wasted. It can be utilized. It is not enough for us to say that our farming pays or that we are doing better than our neighbors. It is our privilege and duty to press our business to the extent of our ability and for all that the farm will give. Hence in this matter of fodder, I ask; can you utilize more of these feeds?"

MODERN DAIRY FARMING.

Modern dairy farming, says the Hon. Hiram Smith, of Wisconsin, starts out with keeping one cow on four acres, and this should be the password to every dairy lodge—"one cow to every four acres;" and this should be rapidly reduced until the undoubted possibility is reached of keeping one to every acre. One of the principles of modern dairy farming is to have our cows give the most milk when dairy goods are at the highest price, which is invaluable in winter. It has been repeatedly demonstrated that a good herd of cows coming into milk in September, October and November will, on the average, give from 4,500 to 6,000 pounds of milk annually. This milk is worth, to sell at a factory, or to manufacture into butter or cheese, $1.50 per 100 pounds, or $58.50 as the average for each cow. In other words dairy farming with one cow to eight acres on 160 acres produces $1,160; modern dairy farming with one cow to four acres produces $2,660, an increase of $1,500; by an outlay for feed and help, a net profit of $840, a sum sufficient to raise the price of land from $50 to $100 per acre. A fundamental condition of successful farming is large crops of corn, not less than two acres of fodder and four acres of field corn for every ten cows, or a total of twenty-four acres for forty cows. All the manure of the farm should be evenly placed on these twenty-four acres during the winter, and the land plowed previous to the 10th of May, and thoroughly harrowed, the corn planted immediately thereafter with a horse drill, the rows three and one-half feet apart, and the kernels from seven to nine inches apart, and cultivated well before the corn comes up with a fine-tooth harrow. Frequently thereafter cultivate until the 10th of July, at which time, if work has been honestly done, it will be free from weeds with never a hoe in the field, and it is almost certain to produce fifty bushels per acre of shelled corn and thirty tons of fodder. It takes less labor to raise twenty-four acres of corn as described above, than to raise half that amount planted in hills and the cultivation deferred until you can see the rows.

Cows and Butter.

Cows should have daily exercise and a never-failing supply of pure water at the barn if possible. They should have a small quantity of salt daily. When they are kept in the barn they should have all the feed they will eat up clean twice a day, and should be fed from six to eight o'clock in the morning and from three to five in the afternoon. They should have all the water they will drink immediately after each foddering, but they never should be allowed to drink ice water. Good, early cut, upland hay should form the basis of their food; supplemented with ensilage, corn fodder or any other good, sweet fodder. They should have grain twice a day while giving milk. One quart of corn meal, one quart of cotton seed meal and two quarts of shorts make an excellent ration. If one objects to ensilage, a good supply of roots should be furnished, and of these carrots and parsnips are best. Cows should be thoroughly cleaned every day with a card and a stiff brush; the brush should be used most. Milk just before feeding in the morning and just after watering in the evening, dividing the time as nearly as possible. "Regularity" should be written in a conspicuous place and strictly adhered to, as cows are very sensitive about being fed, wartered and milked at regular intervals. No one who is not gentle and kind should ever be allowed to handle the cows. They should have a steady milker. Their udders should be thoroughly wiped with a cloth before being milked. Do not brush them immediately before milking, as the operation would fill the air with dust, which in settling would get into the mild. Never use a wooden pail for milk; tin is much better. As soon as possible after it has been drawn strain the milk through a fine wire and a cloth strainer, and cool it at once. Never allow the cows to be run or hurried. Each cow's milk should be thoroughly tested, to ascertain her value as a butter cow. One will be apt to find that some of his best-looking cows that give a good flow of milk, are nearly worthless as butter producers. If a cow will not make at least 250 pounds per year with the above treatment she should be discarded at once. Cows should go dry from four to eight weeks, as they need a rest, and their milk should not be used when nearing the time of parturition. Most butter should be made in winter, as the demand is then greater and the price higher. By using a thoroughbred male, of whatever breed one prefers, and raising the heifer calves from the best cows the herd can be improved to a great extent and the butter production be largely increased. —[N. Y. Herald.

That there is one sensible farmer in this Northwest is evidenced by the following communication to the Fargo Argus. We commend it to all of our readers who are disposed (if we have any such) to find fault with their surroundings. Such farmers as this one deserve to succeed and they will, too, if there is anything in pluck and muscle. Everybody should read it and paste it in their hat that they may not forget it:

You know it is an old adage that soldiers and farmers are always grumblers. I was a soldier and am a farmer too, but since I came to Dakota I have quit grumbling and all because of a few faint hearted neighbors, who in consequence of a hail visitation and the low price of wheat are constantly pouring out to me the story of their troubles and forebodings of the future. Some of them ran away from the grasshoppers in Kansas. They secured nice homesteads, had a fair crop and got a good price last year, but now they think the country has gone to the "domnition bow wows" when the fact is there never was a time when it would pay better to stick to it and see the thing out. I tell 'em, when I was down in Iowa in 1857 in Clinton County wheat sold on the levee for thirty-seven and a half cents a bushel. Then everybody wanted to sell out. The next year, 1858, came the blight and very many fields were simply burnt over, the grain not worth cutting. There wasn't a foot of railway in the county, and then again everybody wanted to quit. It did look blue enough, but those fellows who had the sand just held on, and to-day you can't buy an acre of their land, even unimproved, for less than forty dollars. Now that country has a net-work of railways. But see the difference. Right here we have railways within good hauling distance all over the country. We can produce twice as much to the acre, raise the best wheat in the world and get the best price. It costs nothing to raise vegetables, which are the wonder of the world. There never was such a climate for invigorating health and preserving the vital energies, and I tell you, Mr. Editor, those who stay have the brightest future before them of any people in this country. Our folks are going to work and get all this land we can. It won't be five years before you can't touch an acre of this wheat land for less than thirty dollars. These sharp fellows from down east are around here prospecting now, and they know what they are about. I write you this letter and want you to put it in The Argus. We are going to help one another through the hard times, which I know can't last long, and then when the brighter days come these grumblers and faint hearted fellows will be glad of the advice and encouragement given them through your columns. If this letter don't cheer them up, I will keep at it if you will continue to publish.

A Great Newspaper.

The Pall Mall Gazette, of London, England, did not overstate the case when it said that The New York Independent is "one of the ablest weeklies in existence." It is as overwhelming as a monthly or quarterly magazine, with all the matter in its many departments. Any monthly might indeed be proud if it could show as distinguished a list of contributors as The Independent. In a single department —its story department—we find, among Englishmen, such contributors as Sir Samuel W. Baker, the celebrated Egyptian explorer; Thomas Hardy, W. E. Norris, James Payn, F. W. Robinson and Henry W. Lucy, the well-known and deservedly popular novelists; while among Americans we notice the names of Edward Everett Hale, Frank R Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Sarah O. Jewett, J. S., of Dale, Rebecca Harding Davis and Harriet Prescott Spofford. The Independent printed also, recently, the last story from the pen of the late Ivan Tourgeneff, having secured the only translation from the Russian into English. This department is but a sample of the others. It would seem to us that The Independent offers not only "fifty-two dividends during the year," but, in addition, a stock dividend with each departme. We advise our readers to send for a free sample copy.

"And the old ark rolled over them again," said M. E. Clapp at a late Republican rally in this city. Somehow or other the old thing seems to have been out 'o kilter, as it were, this time. She failed to "roll over 'em" to any alarming extent, and those Cleveland plugs are as white and high as ever. If the truth must be told they seem to be higher if anything. The "Old Ark" must brace up.

The New York store are leaders for low prices on blankets, flannels, underwear, boots and shoes, etc., etc. Call and see them.

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," is a very good motto for Minnesota wheat-raisers to keep in view this season. If it is always darkest just before day the dawn must be near at hand, for never in the history of this State has wheat been so low as now. Forty-nine cents per bushel for our best wheat certainly looks discouraging enough, but if this very depression causes a rise more than proportionate, we can stand it with a good grace.

Moorhead News: Mr. Comstock is very bitter in his denunciation of the cranks and political prostitutes who constitute the following of St. John, for the defeat, if it proves a defeat, of Mr. Blaine. St. John took nearly 30,000 votes from the Republican candidate in New York State alone, not in any hope of carrying the day, but to represent an alleged principle that has slavery, the slavery of the human mind, as its elementary foundation stone. The Republican press throughout the country should give these fools a thorough overhauling.

Information gathered from reliable sources throughout the county shows that very much plowing remains undone, and if this weather continues but little more can be done this fall. This will force many farmers to summer fallow more than they had intended, and will be all the better for the country. While the actual surplus on hand is largely overestimated, yet the fact remains that there has been an overproduction of wheat, and that a surplus of this year's crop will be left over for next year. An effectual remedy for this would be for every farmer to sow only one-half his usual amount next year, allowing the balance of his land to be cultivated properly. Thus he would insure for himself as much money for what wheat he had for sale as he now gets for double the amount, besides fitting his land for raising larger crops. If the present cold snap means a freeze up it will be greatly to the benefit of all concerned as it will cause much land to be left unplowed that would otherwise would be plowed and sowed to wheat.

MISS LIZZIE EVANS.

"Dewdrop" Presented at the Princess Last Night.

"Dewdrop" attracted a good-sized audience to the Princess last night. The merit of the play and the excellence of the performance deserved a crowded house. In the part of Dewdrop, Miss Evans has a greater opportunity than in that of Chip to display her ability, and she gave a most charming representation of the waif brought up among fisherman. In the second and third acts she was seen at her best, and the frequent applause showered upon her showed how thoroughly the performance was appreciated by the audience. Miss Evans was called before the curtain several times during the evening. There is a delightful, fresh, and natural effect about Miss Evans' acting that renders it especially pleasing. Miss Ida Burrows made an excellent Sylvia Yelverton, and Mr. Scharf as the old light-keeper was deserving of special mention. The rest of the support was good.—[Winnipeg Daily Times.

Found a Pocket Book.

Grand Forks Herald: This morning Marshal Hennessy found a pocket book on the pavement near the Citizens National bank. It contained $50. He immediately left word at the bank and came to the Herald office to advertise his find. He had only gone out when the owner Commissioner Sullivan of Polk County, came rushing after. He had just been in the bank, drew the money and in putting it in his pocket, it worked through. He was lucky that the pocket book was found by as honest a man as Marshal Hennessy.

Remember the "Blue Front," corner Main and Second streets.

How do you like it as far as you've got?

It is comical to see how Minnesota Democrats plume themselves over "our" victory!

It is as good as the side-show to a circus to see how surprised the St. Paul Globe is at the result of the election. If Hall don't recover from his surprise pretty soon he will be as mad as a March hare—he don't lack much of it now.

We did not expect ever to be obliged to say it, but "you can't most always sometimes tell," and that is why we are obliged to say that Cleveland and Hendricks will be inaugurated on the 4th of March next. A solid South, aided by such soreheads as Conkling and a mistaken notion of the Prohibitionists, aided by a fraudulent count in New York does the business, and the country is in for it. Those who have howled so long and earnestly for a change in the administration will now have an opportunity to test its efficacy, and we shall see what we shall see. We trust that the high moral Prohibitionists will be satisfied at this great triumph of a high moral principle. (?)

Prohibition.

We suppose that there are actually hose who voted the prohibition ticket honestly supposing that they were accomplishing a good thing for their cause. They knew that the only friends they have are in the Republican party and they knew that a vote for Prohibition was a half vote for Democracy and yet they gave that vote "for principle" as they wisely tell us. One is puzzled which to admire most their supreme innocence or lack of good judgment. They now have the consolation of knowing that they have defeated their only hope by their own pig-headedness.

It is not so much a matter of surprise that so many farmers are pinched this fall when we come to consider the fact that up till now everything they could raise has been sent out of the country to buy horses, machinery, cows, hogs and everything they require to conduct their business. The only wonder about it is that so many of them are on their feet as there are. Now all that is gradually changing and almost every farmer has his machinery paid for, is able to raise his own horses, cows, hogs and sheep, and instead of having these things all to buy, will soon have them to sell. All this will have a tendency to keep all that money which has heretofore been sent out of the country in circulation at home. Again consider the vast sums that have been sent out to buy lumber and what its effect would have been if it had been kept in circulation. To-day our own saw mill furnishes all that farmers need at prices below any ever known in this market. The trouble is not that this country has not made money enough to run it, but because that money has been sent outside for the necessaries of life. When one stops to consider the vast volume of wheat that every year is raised here, and then contemplates the effects which would be produced if the money for it was kept at home, he can see at a glance that the country is far from being bankrupt, as the day is not far distant when that state of things will exist. Let us take courage and labor in hope.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
Executive Department.

In accordance with law and a most revered custom, I do hereby set apart and appoint Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of the present month, as a day of solemn and public thanksgiving to Almighty God for his manifold blessings and mercies to us as a State and Nation; and I recommend and exhort the people of the State, that, laying aside their ordinary toils and cares, and assembling on that day in their usual places of worship and around their sacred firesides, they lift up their hearts, with grateful songs of praise and other observances, to our Father and Benefactor for the continuance of peace and general prosperity, for immunity from devastation by disease or the elements, for harvests of surpassing abundance and the other rewards of labor, and for the hopefulness of resolved, contented minds in hardy, healthful bodies.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State, at the Capitol in St. Paul, this 11th day of November, A. D. 1884.

L. F. HUBBARD.

By the Governor,
FRED VON BAUMBACH,
Secretary of State.

GOOD PROSPECTS OF WHEAT RAISERS IN THE NORTHWEST.

THE JOURNAL has said and has faith to believe that the depression of the business of wheat raising in the Northwest this year must eventually result in great good to this country and all of the signs of the times point to that end in the near future. While the price for wheat has been way below the cost of production the fact remains that in other localities it has been far worse than here so much so that in the winter wheat districts there has been far less wheat sown this fall than ever before and the indications are that less spring wheat will be sown next spring than ever before and if our farmers in the Northwest sow about one-half their usual amount, summer-fallowing the balance the result will be to reduce the surplus remaining over so much that they will get for the wheat they do raise as much as they would if they raised double the amount. The cost of production being less they will thus realize more profit on what they do raise and leave their land in excellent shape for a good crop in '86, at which time wheat will be back to a profitable basis. Reports from England show a loss on wheat of at least $10 per acre which will force farmers there out of wheat. Farmers east have lost more on wheat than we have and, as their high priced lands are adapted to other productions they will also be forced out of wheat raising leaving that important industry almost wholly to this New Northwest that is specially adapted to wheat growing. We would not counsel farmers to sow enormous crops in 1885, generally but we would counsel them to make ready to put in every acre they can get ready in 1886. By thoroughly summer fallowing one-half of their land next year it will be in good shape for a rousing old crop in '86 and those who have a large crop then will have a bonanza. Instead of being blue and discouraged this year our farmers have every reason to feel encouraged at their prospects which were never more brilliant and as that Dakota farmer says, those who have sand enough to hang on will reap a rich reward.

FARMING.

There are farmers and farmers in this country as well as in every country. Some of them are making money every year while others are not and these wonder why their neighbors all have so much "luck" while year after year they are going to the dogs. Now, there may be many reasons for this and there doubtless are but when we see a "farmer (?)" who spends all of his time at the village saloons, leaving all his important work to the care of irresponsible hired men we do not wonder very much at his want of "luck" as he calls it. If that same man was breaking a span of colts he would not think of hitching them to a wagon and allowing them to take care of themselves as best they might all day while he sought amusement elsewhere! He would naturally think that in order to break them successfully he must personally attend to them. He must NAIVE them. So if he would be successful on his farm he must "push things." It is not enough to give orders to some one who is interested no further than his wages; he must personally see that everything is done as it should be and that not a minute is wasted. A man to be a successful farmer must be so much in love with his business that he will give it his whole undivided attention. Such a man will never fail providing he has good common sense to back him up. A man might have hundreds of acres under cultivation with a large number of cattle, horses, hogs and sheep with money in the banks and yet if he neglects his farm and stock, neglecting his business for any cause whatsoever he would be a pauper in a very short time. No business will run itself and that man who acts upon the principle that it will is worse than a fool. There is an old maxim which no man can afford to lose sight of, that is "THERE IS NO EXCELLENCE WITHOUT LABOR." Again a man may work like a galley slave all his life and if he does not exercise good judgment it avails him nothing. The best business men we have, the men who make the most money are those who work hard both summer and winter, whose hearts are in their business and who give it their whole strength. Some grumblers there are who with plenty of stock which should be their especial care allow the stock to go uncared for and unheeded while they enjoy a good whine about their "ill luck" when if they would brace up and attend to their business they might be somebody in the world. They have had every opportunity to make a success and are themselves to blame if they do not. Some farmers seem to think that as soon as the plow is frozen fast in the furrow that settles it. There is now nothing more to be done until that plow "freezes loose" in the spring. There's where they make their mistake. If there is nothing else to do the farmer can put in his winter to good advantage studying ways and means to better his condition. That man is said to be a true genius who can cause two blades of grass to grow where only one grew before. The long winter furnishes a good opportunity for farmers and farmers clubs (EVERY PROGRESSIVE NEIGHBORHOOD SHOULD HAVE ONE) to consider how these things can be done. The wise, progressive farmer will have some stock to care for in the winter and he will endeavor to make that stock pay the most by attention to improving it and caring for it. There is no country in the world where FARMING will pay better than here. Farming is a BUSINESS and when so considered and managed will prove successful.

OUR PREMIUM OFFER.

THE JOURNAL, as a rule, does not believe in offering premiums to its subscribers, preferring to put the expense necessary to procure a cheap picture or trash of that sort generally offered, into the paper to make it worth the price, but by reference to our advertiseing columns it will be seen that we make an exception to the rule this fall. This we do for the reason that we have the opportunity to offer our readers a valuable present upon terms that all can afford to accept. There are none too poor to pay up the small amount they owe THE JOURNAL on subscription, and we now offer them as an inducement so to do a valuable agricultural paper free for one year. All old subscribers who will pay up arrears and one year in advance will receive the AMERICAN FARMER, and all new subscribers who will pay for two years in advance at our regular schedule rate will also be entitled to receive the premium. Those who subscribe under this offer will not be entitled to the usual rebate of fifty cents. Now is the time to provide yourselves with two papers for the price of one.

Raising Pork.

We wonder if those farmers who always buy what pork they use have ever taken the pains to look over their store bill to see how much that item alone costs them? Pork during the year has been from 12½ to 20 cents per lb. Supposing a man has bought during the year $100 worth of pork. Now he has to sell his wheat at 49 cents per bushel to pay for it which makes his pork cost him very much more than the amount the merchant charged him. It is no trouble comparatively, for a farmer to raise at least what pork he consumes on his farm and all who this year have done so can count their meat bill so much clear gain. A Berkshire hog, if he can get a clover field to run in during the summer and pure water to drink needs little else to sustain life and keep him in good order. If clover can not be had one can sow an acre or so of barley, wheat and oats mixed which will answer all purposes. There is no money in raising hogs in this country if you think you have got to grain your hogs the year around for they will eat their heads off but such a course is not necessary as hogs will do as well on grass as cattle. Barley and peas make good fattening feed and can be raised cheaply. The nearer a farmer can come to raising his own living the more independent will he be. The idea that a man can raise wheat alone and make money at it is ruinous and sooner or later it will be understood.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Nov. 19th, 1884.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Jan. 16th, 1885, viz: GEORGE M. SWIFT, H'd No. 7350, for the n½ ne¼ and n½ nw¼ S. 34, T. 149, R. 43. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Geo. Tripp, Geo. A. Cable, Geo. Pollard and Geo. Tice, all of Mentor, Polk Co., Minn.

THAT SETTLES IT.

The official canvass in New York State, having shown a majority of a trifle over one thousand plurality for Cleveland, settles the business and shows that the United States will have a Democratic President for four years from the fourth of March next. The Democrats appear to be as much surprised as any one at this unexpected outcome and hardly know how to act. Their only boast seems to be that they "have downed old Jim Blaine." They do not claim that a better man is elected, but seem to be content with beating Blaine. As to the effects of this election upon the country the worst we anticipate is the doubt that must exist as to what the attitude of the administration will be. As a matter of fact we do not believe that much, if any, change will be made in the tariff question, but the doubt may tend to lock up the capitalists' money until after the inauguration of the incoming administration. If the Democratic platform pronounced in favor of protection or against it, all this doubt and uncertainty would not exist, but as it can be construed to mean anything you wish, events alone can prove what the policy of the new administration will be. One thing is a dead sure thing. We of the Northwest can stand it to see the flood gates of free trade thrown wide open far better than can the manufacturing interests in the East, and New York cannot point to Minnesota and say "you did it," if in the future the great interests of New York shall suffer by the change. Our farmers can stand a season of low prices for goods, merchandise and everything they have to buy, as well as cheap labor, while this state of things would ruin the manufactories of the East and the poor laborers there would starve to death or be driven west to grow up with the country. That a mistake has been made we are convinced, but we think we of the Northwest can stand it better than can those who are responsible for it.

The Dems had what they call a rat—ification hoodoo Saturday night which—considering they have waited 24 years for the chance, we must say was rather a slim affair.

The Brainerd, St. Paul and Northwestern.

Red Lake Falls Messenger: Advices have reached us that Mr. C. F. Kindred has succeeded in placing the bonds of the Brainerd, St. Paul and Northwestern Company, and they now have ample capital to build with. The directors had a meeting at Brainerd last week and decided to make immediate arrangements for ties and other material and for early commencement of operations on the line from Brainerd to Red Lake Falls.

Yearling Butter.

In the following article The Dairy calls attention to a matter worthy of careful consideration:

"Old butter is scorned and rejected of men. But not because of its age, unless with age it has gained in strength. There is no reason why year-old butter should go a begging, except that it is poor. If it is a fact that butter cannot be made now to keep a year in the very best condition, it is because, as we sometimes half suspect, the creamery system has spoiled our old style of making good keeping butter. No American will use anything for want of bragging. And we are bragging a good deal of late about our butter, which is remarkably fine when it is a year old. But butter of the finest flavor a year old used to be quite common years ago. We remember in our younger days a tub of butter which was accidentally left among the empty tubs, in the milk house, and was not discovered until the next year, when it was shipped with a few others to New York, and sold for 3 cents a pound more than the new butter. We also remember sampling a dozen or more firkins, just twenty years ago, made in Ohio, in what was then known as the Western Reserve, and which, opened in March, was nine months old, and that was truly gilt edged, both in color, texture and flavor. We have never known that lot surpassed in quality since, and there was no Jersey in it, nothing but good native stock.

Now, why should we not have such butter now? "Old butter" is a byword, a reproach; and is scarcely salable at less than half the price of new butter at the present time, and for a few years back; while years ago June butter was good from June to June, as old dairymen and dealers will well remember. And to have such old butter, nothing is required but to follow the method which was then in use. This was to make good butter and pack it well. But both of these are easier said than done without specific directions, which we give for the benefit of those who will still adhere to the old style, and will have yearling butter on hand.

The cows are fed upon good, fresh pasture. The butter is well washed free from the buttermilk, and is salted at the rate of one ounce to the pound. It is set away until next day, when it is worked over, and the brine appears among the grains of it like clear dew drops, as it is squeezed out. No trace of milk is to be seen in it. It is worked [illegible] well rubbed with salt, filled with water, put away to wait for the butter. It is once more well rinsed with cold water, then lightly sprinkled with fine salt and the butter is packed in, closely filling every vacancy. As three or four inches of butter are packed in and tightly pressed down, a light sprinkling of fine salt is given to it. This is repeated until the tub is filled within a quarter of an inch of the top. It is then covered with a piece of fine muslin, first thoroughly washed and rinsed, and dipped in brine. This is cut so as to have a border of a quarter of an inch over the edge of the tub. The cloth is fitted closely around the edge of the pail, and fine salt is put on it and pressed down level with the edge, especially close to the edge, to exclude the air. The border is laid over the edge of the tub, and is clipped evenly close to the out edge. The cover is then put on and pressed down and fastened. The butter, being dry, will not shrink; all the acid and the air in the pores of the wood having been taken out by the boiling water, and the cloth having been washed free from clay and flour paste put in it for dressing, the butter is not discolored a particle, and as the air is entirely excluded, the butter undergoes a slow ripening process by which it acquires and keeps that fine, nutty, aromatic flavor which distinguishes the best old butter, and is rarely or never found in the new article. Butter that is good, when packed, and is packed in this way, will keep good as when packed, and get a little better flavored in the meantime, for a whole year.

THAT SETTLES IT.

The official canvass in New York State, having shown a majority of a trifle over one thousand plurality for Cleveland, settles the business and shows that the United States will have a Democratic President for four years from the fourth of March next. The Democrats appear to be as much surprised as any one at this unexpected outcome and hardly know how to act. Their only boast seems to be that they "have flowned old Jim Blaine." They do not claim that a better man is elected, but seem to be content with beating Blaine. As to the effects of this election upon the country the worst we anticipate is the doubt that must exist as to what the attitude of the administration will be. As a matter of fact we do not believe that much, if any, change will be made in the tariff question, but the doubt may tend to lock up the capitalists' money until after the inauguration of the incoming administration. If the Democratic platform pronounced in favor of protection or against it, all this doubt and uncertainty would not exist, but as it can be construed to mean anything you wish, events alone can prove what the policy of the new administration will be. One thing is a dead sure thing. We of the Northwest can stand it to see the flood gates of free trade thrown wide open far better than can the manufacturing interests in the East, and New York cannot point to Minnesota and say "you did it," if in the future the great interests of New York shall suffer by the change. Our farmers can stand a season of low prices for goods, merchandise and everything they have to buy, as well as cheap labor, while this state of things would ruin the manufactories of the East and the poor laborers there would starve to death or be driven west to grow up with the country. That a mistake has been made we are convinced, but we think we of the Northwest can stand it better than can those who are responsible for it.

The Dems had what they call a rat—ification hoodoo Saturday night which—considering they have waited 24 years for the chance, we must say was rather a slim affair.

The Brainerd, St. Paul and Northwestern.

Red Lake Falls Messenger: Advices have reached us that Mr. C. F. Kindred has succeeded in placing the bonds of the Brainerd, St. Paul and Northwestern Company, and they now have ample capital to build with. The directors had a meeting at Brainerd last week and decided to make immediate arrangements for ties and other material and for early commencement of operations on the line from Brainerd to Red Lake Falls.

Yearling Butter.

In the following article The Dairy calls attention to a matter worthy of careful consideration:

"Old butter is scorned and rejected of men." But not because of its age, unless with age it has gained in strength. There is no reason why year-old butter should go a begging, except that it is poor. If it is a fact that butter cannot be made now to keep a year in the very best condition, it is because, as we sometimes half suspect, the creamery system has spoiled our old style of making good keeping butter. No American will use anything for want of bragging. And we are bragging a good deal of late about our butter, which is remarkably fine when it is a year old. But butter of the finest flavor a year old used to be quite common years ago. We remember in our younger days a tub of butter which was accidentally left among the empty tubs in the milk house, and was not discovered until the next year, when it was shipped with a few others to New York, and sold for 3 cents a pound more than the new butter. We also remember sampling a dozen or more firkins, just twenty years ago, made in Ohio, in what was then known as the Western Reserve, and which, opened in March, was nine months old, and that was truly gilt edged, both in color, texture and flavor. We have never known that lot surpassed in quality since, and there was no Jersey in it, nothing but good native stock.

Now, why should we not have such butter now? "Old butter" is a byword, a reproach, and is scarcely salable at less than half the price of new butter at the present time, and for a few years back, while years ago June butter was good from June to June, as old dairymen and dealers will well remember. And to have such old butter nothing is required but to follow the method which was then in use. This was to make good butter and pack it well. But both of these are easier said than done without specific directions, which we give for the benefit of those who will still adhere to the old style and will have yearling butter on hand. The cows are fed upon good, fresh pasture. The butter is well washed free from the buttermilk and is salted at the rate of one ounce to the pound. [illegible] well rubbed with salt, filled with water, put away to wait for the butter. It is once more well rinsed with cold water, then lightly sprinkled with fine salt and the butter is packed in closely, filling every vacancy. As three or four inches of butter are packed in and tightly pressed down, a light sprinkling of fine salt is given to it. This is repeated until the tub is filled within a quarter of an inch of the top. It is then covered with a piece of fine muslin, first thoroughly washed and rinsed, and dipped in brine. This is cut so as to have a border of a quarter of an inch over the edge of the tub. The cloth is fitted closely around the edge of the pail, and fine salt is put on it and pressed down level with the edge, especially close to the edge, to exclude the air. The border is laid over the edge of the tub, and is clipped evenly close to the out edge. The cover is then put on and pressed down and fastened. The butter, being dry, will not shrink; all the acid and the air in the pores of the wood having been taken out by the boiling water, and the cloth having been washed free from clay and flour paste put in it for dressing, the butter is not discolored a particle, and as the air is entirely excluded, the butter undergoes a slow ripening process by which it acquires and keeps that fine, nutty, aromatic flavor which distinguishes the best old butter, and is rarely or never found in the new article. Butter that is good, when packed, and is packed in this way, will keep good as when packed, and get a little better flavored in the meantime, for a whole year.

THE DAIRYMEN.

Eighth Annual Meeting of the Minnesota Dairymen's Association at Austin.

The eighth annual meeting of the Minnesota Butter, Cheese Association commenced its session at Austin, Minn., on the 18th inst. L. A. Pierce in his address of welcome among other things said:

"We greet you as a benefactor rather than a guest, in that we are pleased to recognize the fact that your work while with us is designed to and will be in the interest and for the benefit of our citizens as well as yourselves; that you are here to speak words of wisdom to us and give us the benefit of facts learned by you from experience, and which, if heeded and intelligently acted upon, must result in great good and increased prosperity to our entire community. When your organization began its labor it was a pioneer in this country in the special work to which it was devoted, and you who were then members of it saw its teachings standing alone in an unbroken wilderness. But you have lived to see your ideas take root in the rich soil in which they were planted, and attain gigantic growth, until to-day you have the proud satisfaction of knowing that the products of the Minnesota creamery and dairy have so improved under the teachings of your own and similar organizations that they are sought after in the leading markets of the world. The future prosperity of this country is dependent, in a large measure, upon intelligent agriculture. Intelligent agriculture is dependent for success in a still larger measure upon the cow and her products. More especially is this true of this portion of the State, in which experience has taught us that purely grain farming is not, and cannot be a success. As long as it was followed gaunt poverty was always present and an inmate of the farmer's home. No farmer can afford, at the present day, to raise grain to sell. He should sell stock and dairy products, not grain. He should sell his grain and hay to his cows. They will pay him a higher price for it in dairy products, than he can realize from a sale in the markets. But when he makes this new departure, and seeks this new market he must have an intelligent and scientific understanding regarding what he is about to do in order to realize an increased prosperity from it.

Vice President O. C. Gregg responded as follows:

When Horace Greeley years ago put forth that famous advice, "Go West, young man, and grow up with the country," two classes heard it. One class like the other immigrated hither and became the pioneers of this grand Western country. They came to a country rich in natural resources, but undeveloped, and to these early toilers we owe the advantages of to-day. These undeveloped resources have been made available. There are certain principles which should bear on your prosperity and interests. Some say the dairy interest is prominent simply because it has been boomed; that any other interest would be equally prominent if boomed. This is not so. There is a principle in this matter as positive as that of gravitation. There are certain advantages which we must use if we aim at highest success. This is especially true in agriculture. Many try to farm it in ignorance of fundamental principles and fail. The principles are bounded by climatic lines and by variety of soil. Men cannot farm it in Minnesota as they do in Texas. The difference is mainly in climate, and while so many are ready to see only unmitigated evil in our severe winters, let us look at its advantages. In six [illegible]

a good dairy cow. Thousands of cows tended by intelligent men won't pay for their keeping. We point to the record of the cow Mariam of Canada, a record of thirty-five pounds of unsalted butter a week, a good deal as turfmen speak of the 2:09 of Maud S. Another thing: A change is coming in the Northwest as to the time of dairying. We are to see the day when we will turn our grain into winter butter. There has, of late, come a widespread demand for fresh butter the year around, and who is to supply this demand? It sets a man's faith back to see what city people have to eat all winter. Fresh butter in December must be made in December, and although many say winter dairying cannot be a success, yet I say the people can have good butter and fresh butter all winter if they will only use their advantages. Notice the condition of things. The six months of idleness in winter is the worst feature of agriculture in Minnesota. Men get discontented and despondent. Men must be busy all the year to be happy, and men must run their business through the year to be economical and successful. Now, suppose we try grain raising during summer and spend our winters turning our grain into a most profitable product. I know from my own experience that it can be done very profitably. In winter butter commands the very highest price, and then the farmer has leisure to give attention to details which summer does not afford. We are placed on this earth not only to occupy, but to subdue it. We may improve it, and lay the foundation of a solid, happy home. But if we farmers do this, we must cease to raise grain exclusively for sale in the markets, and turn it into dairy products. We are yet to produce the bulk of dairy products in this country. We have only begun to push up our products into sight. Let us keep up with the ever-increasing demand for better dairy products, and arrange our dairying so as to take the best advantage of the great markets. I believe winter dairying to be one of the great opportunities of prosperity to the Minnesota farmer.

Hog Cholera and Corn.

We often hear it asserted that hog cholera, so-called, is due directly or remotely to the too exclusive use of Indian corn. There may be some truth in it, but there is no proof. Indian corn is one of the best foods for fattening hogs. It is particularly rich in starch and oil, and of course, this means a comparatively low proportion of nitrogenous or flesh-forming ingredients. Wheat, barley, and oats, contain more nitrogen and mineral matter. Peas are still richer in nitrogen.

The nitrogen and mineral matter of wheat exists largely in the bran, or in the part of the grain immediately under the bran. If corn is deficient in nitrogen and mineral matter, the evil, it would seem, could be corrected by feeding bran and fine middlings in connection with the corn. The practical difficulty is to get the pigs to eat the bran. They prefer the corn. The low price of wheat gives us a good chance to see if pigs will be healthier with less corn. We do not say that wheat is worth more than corn to fatten hogs, but it is quite probable that for young growing pigs, wheat is the healthier and better food, and if wheat is worth no more than corn, wheat is probably the cheaper food, especially for young animals. We believe in corn. It is the grand American cereal. We can raise it at less cost per bushel than wheat, but when wheat cannot be sold for more than corn, we can feed it to our animals with good advantage. —[Joseph Harris in American Agriculturist for December.

Connecticut Red Oxen.

The great hold which Devon cattle had, and has upon the heart of the Connecticut farmer rests upon the style and excellence of the working oxen. There certainly is a style about them which no other cattle have, and their advocates claim extraordinary docility. They are high strung and mettlesome, like thoroughbred horses, quick in their motions, fast walkers, not timorous, willing to pull, for all they are worth [illegible] yokes them and has them trained not only to "come up!" "gee!" "haw!" and "back!" but to drive without the yoke, single and double, sometimes to kneel, and to lie down. The steers are fit for some kinds of light service at three, efficient at four, and in perfection as oxen at five.—[Col. Weld in American Agriculturist for December.

Finished Products.

"Buy the best," is sound advice. Any shrewd purchaser learns to follow it at an early date, and buys of whoever has the best goods. It pays as well on the farm as elsewhere. Twenty-five cents is a common price for butter in the older States. In the dairy regions most farmers are content to sell at the medium price, at the country store, and take their pay in goods, and settle once a year. They do not have modern improvements or use ice, and are not scrupulously clean, from the milking to the packing of the balls for market. They fall short in several respects of "gilt-edged butter." But my neighbor A. believes in finished products. He uses ice, every vessel is kept thoroughly scoured and sweet, his cream is well ripened, churned twice a week, the butter is thoroughly worked, salted by rule, packed in neat balls, and sent to market in a cold atmosphere. He does not sell at the store at the merchant's price, but supplies families at thirty-two cents a pound, and to families in the neighboring city at thirty-five cents. Every one that uses his butter is satisfied with this finished product, and continues to purchase as long as he can secure it. Mr. A. finds that Jerseys and their grades, are the best butter cows, and has weeded all others out of his herd. He milks them for ten and a half months, and has no occasion to trade off dry cows. By regulating the time of calving, he keeps the churn going the year round. Mr. B. is another neighbor, who keeps a dozen cows of high Jersey grade, makes a gilt-edged butter the year round, and sells in the city for thirty-five cents in summer, and forty cents in winter. With suitable buildings and fodder, it is no more difficult to make the best butter in winter than in summer, and the economy is not simply in the higher price.—[Wm. Clift in American Agriculturist for December.

Swine Farming.

We are more and more impressed with the value of hogs on the farm. Many farmers make their cows the main feature; the buildings are constructed with reference to their management, and the rotation of crops is fixed to promote the same end. We also have farms devoted to horse-breeding, and whole sections of country where sheep-breeding is the leading industry. To make these different branches of husbandry a specialty, is the right course for success. In the great corn districts of the West, hogs are raised in large numbers, but we are forced to say, from observation, that it is generally corn, more than care, which gives the business its degree of success. Often enough corn is wasted if fed with care to fatten the entire stock. The western hog does not fill the entire place for which he was designed. He is simply a condensed corn-crib, with a great many rat holes. This business basis may possibly answer where corn is cheap and land requires no fertilizer, but in the largest portion of this country corn is not so abundant that the farmer can afford to waste it, or is land so rich but that it can become more productive. Hogs should be made a factor of improvement on every farm. We should have swine farms the same as dairy, horse, and sheep farms, with the fields and buildings adapted to them. Hogs should be fed in the fields with a rotation in their feeding grounds the same as in crops. In this way, in a few years, the whole farm can be gone over and every field enriched [illegible]

THE DAIRYMEN.

Eighth Annual Meeting of the Minnesota Dairymen's Association at Austin.

The eighth annual meeting of the Minnesota Butter, Cheese Association commenced its session at Austin, Minn., on the 18th inst. L. A. Pierce in his address of welcome, among other things said:

"We greet you as a benefactor rather than a guest, in that we are pleased to recognize the fact that your work while with us is designed to and will be in the interest and for the benefit of our citizens as well as yourselves; that you are here to speak words of wisdom to us and give us the benefit of facts learned by you from experience, and which, if heeded and intelligently acted upon, must result in great good and increased prosperity to our entire community. When your organization began its labor it was a pioneer in this country in the special work to which it was devoted, and you who were then members of it saw its teachings standing alone in an unbroken wilderness. But you have lived to see your ideas take root in the rich soil in which they were planted, and attain gigantic growth, until to-day you have the proud satisfaction of knowing that the products of the Minnesota creamery and dairy have so improved under the teachings of your own and similar organizations that they are sought after in the leading markets of the world. The future prosperity of this country is dependent, in a large measure, upon intelligent agriculture. Intelligent agriculture is dependent for success in a still larger measure upon the cow and her products. More especially is this true of this portion of the State, in which experience has taught us that purely grain farming is not, and cannot be a success. As long as it was followed gaunt poverty was always present and an inmate of the farmer's home. No farmer can afford, at the present day, to raise grain to sell. He should sell stock and dairy products, not grain. He should sell his grain and hay to his cows. They will pay him a higher price for it, in dairy products, than he can realize from a sale in the markets. But when he makes this new departure, and seeks this new market he must have an intelligent and scientific understanding regarding what he is about to do in order to realize an increased prosperity from it.

Vice President O. C. Gregg responded as follows:

When Horace Greeley years ago put forth that famous advice, "Go West, young man, and grow up with the country," two classes heard it. One class like the other immigrated hither and became the pioneers of this grand Western country. They came to a country rich in natural resources, but undeveloped, and to these early toilers we owe the advantages of to-day. These undeveloped resources have been made available. There are certain principles which should bear on your prosperity and interests. Some say the dairy interest is prominent simply because it has been boomed; that any other interest would be equally prominent if boomed. This is not so. There is a principle in this matter as positive as that of gravitation. There are certain advantages which we must use if we aim at highest success. This is especially true in agriculture. Many try to farm it in ignorance of fundamental principles and fail. The principles are bounded by climatic lines and by variety of soil. Men cannot farm it in Minnesota as they do in Texas. The difference is mainly in climate, and while so many are ready to see only unmitigated evil in our severe winters, let us look at its advantages. In six months of winter we find a wonderful ally against insects of all kinds. If it were not for this we would be overrun with insects of hurtful character. During the six months of winter no weeds go to seed, and so our land does not become so foul. In six months of summer we have ample time to grow to the best maturity all the grains and also bring to perfection all the grasses. We have a sod that cannot be found in more southern sections, which will grow more grass to the acre. Go further south and cattle are grown largely without shelter, and hence the large ranches in Texas and other States; but this system of large herds of cattle necessitates a large section of country

GIVEN UP TO NOMADIC LIFE.

There can be no villages, no neighborhoods, and when that country becomes filled up and cattle are raised as we raise them here, it will be found that less cattle per acre can be raised in the South than in Minnesota. Here winter compels us to go to shelter, necessitates expense, labor and care, and this gives a better grade of cattle, so as to give better returns per head. A Minnesota farmer cannot compete with a Texas farmer in growing four-cent beef. The solution of profitable farming lies in a well-bred cow. Yet only one cow in twenty-five in Minnesota to-day is really a good dairy cow. Thousands of cows tended by intelligent men won't pay for their keeping. We point to the record of the cow Mariam of Canada, a record of thirty-five pounds of unsalted butter a week, a good deal as turfmen speak of the 2:09 of Maud S. Another thing: A change is coming in the Northwest as to the time of dairying. We are to see the day when we will turn our grain into winter butter. There has, of late, come a widespread demand for fresh butter the year around, and who is to supply this demand? It sets a man's faith back to see what city people have to eat all winter. Fresh butter in December must be made in December, and although many say winter dairying cannot be a success, yet I say the people can have good butter and fresh butter all winter if they will only use their advantages. Notice the condition of things. The six months of idleness in winter is the worst feature of agriculture in Minnesota. Men get discontented and despondent. Men must be busy all the year to be happy, and men must run their business through the year to be economical and successful. Now, suppose we try grain raising during summer and spend our winters turning our grain into a most profitable product. I know from my own experience that it can be done very profitably. In winter butter commands the very highest price, and then the farmer has leisure to give attention to details which summer does not afford. We are placed on this earth not only to occupy but to subdue it. We may improve it, and lay the foundation of a solid, happy home. But if we farmers do this, we must cease to raise grain exclusively for sale in the markets, and turn it into dairy products. We are yet to produce the bulk of dairy products in this country. We have only begun to push up our products into sight. Let us keep up with the ever-increasing demand for better dairy products, and arrange our dairying so as to take the best advantage of the great markets. I believe winter dairying to be one of the great opportunities of prosperity to the Minnesota farmer.

Hog Cholera and Corn.

We often hear it asserted that hog cholera, so-called, is due directly or remotely to the too exclusive use of Indian corn. There may be some truth in it, but there is no proof. Indian corn is one of the best foods for fattening hogs. It is particularly rich in starch and oil, and of course, this means a comparatively low proportion of nitrogenous or flesh-forming ingredients. Wheat, barley, and oats, contain more nitrogen and mineral matter. Peas are still richer in nitrogen.

The nitrogen and mineral matter of wheat exists largely in the bran, or in the part of the grain immediately under the bran. If corn is deficient in nitrogen and mineral matter, the evil, it would seem, could be corrected by feeding bran and fine middlings in connection with the corn. The practical difficulty is to get the pigs to eat the bran. They prefer the corn. The low price of wheat gives us a good chance to see if pigs will be healthier with less corn. We do not say that wheat is worth more than corn to fatten hogs, but it is quite probable that for young growing pigs, wheat is the healthier and better food, and if wheat is worth no more than corn, wheat is probably the cheaper food, especially for young animals. We believe in corn. It is the grand American cereal. We can raise it at less cost per bushel than wheat, but when wheat cannot be sold for more than corn, we can feed it to our animals with good advantage.—[Joseph Harris in American Agriculturist for December.

Connecticut Red Oxen.

The great hold which Devon cattle had and has upon the heart of the Connecticut farmer rests upon the style and excellence of the working oxen. There certainly is a style about them which no other cattle have, and their advocates claim extraordinary docility. They are high strung and mettlesome, like thorough-bred horses, quick in their motions, fast walkers, not timorous, willing to pull "for all they are worth," patient, good feeders, and make the very best beef. This last quality depends of course more or less on the age of the ox. It therefore pays to work them a few years and turn them into beef, when there are others coming on. Still, a good yoke of Devon oxen will last and do hard work for many years, and at twelve or fourteen years old will fatten well and make better beef than common cattle several years younger. It is rather remarkable that a team of oxen which will walk off on the road four miles an hour, or trot with a wagon like a pair of horses, will draw a plow in rough stony land slowly and carefully, being watchful when it strikes a stone or is "snagged" in a root not to jerk, or throw their full weight upon it unless so directed, they, as it were, trying to ease the plow over obstacles. In this respect good oxen seem to have more sense than ordinary horses, proverbial as the latter are, for "horse-sense."

Breaking steers is the Connecticut boy's pastime and pride. He often begins with calves at six months old, yokes them and has them trained not only to "come up!" "gee!" "haw!" and "back!" but to drive without the yoke, single and double, sometimes to kneel, and to lie down. The steers are fit for some kinds of light service at three, efficient at four, and in perfection as oxen at five.—[Col. Weld in American Agriculturist for December.

Finished Products.

"Buy the best," is sound advice. Any shrewd purchaser learns to follow it at an early date, and buys of whoever has the best goods. It pays as well on the farm as elsewhere. Twenty-five cents is a common price for butter in the older States. In the dairy regions most farmers are content to sell at the medium price, at the country store, and take their pay in goods, and settle once a year. They do not have modern improvements or use ice, and are not scrupulously clean, from the milking to the packing of the balls for market. They fall short in several respects of "gilt-edged butter." But my neighbor A. believes in finished products. He uses ice, every vessel is kept thoroughly scoured and sweet, his cream is well-ripened, churned twice a week, the butter is thoroughly worked, salted by rule, packed in neat balls, and sent to market in a cold atmosphere. He does not sell at the store at the merchant's price, but supplies families at thirty-two cents a pound, and to families in the neighboring city at thirty-five cents. Every one that uses his butter is satisfied with this finished product, and continues to purchase as long as he can secure it. Mr. A. finds that Jerseys and their grades, are the best butter cows, and has weeded all others out of his herd. He milks them for ten and and a half months, and has no occasion to trade off dry cows. By regulating the time of calving, he keeps the churn going the year round. Mr. B. is another neighbor, who keeps a dozen cows of high Jersey grade, makes a gilt-edged butter the year round, and sells in the city for thirty-five cents in summer, and forty cents in winter. With suitable buildings and fodder, it is no more difficult to make the best butter in winter than in summer, and the economy is not simply in the higher price.—[Wm. Clift in American Agriculturist for December.

Swine Farming.

We are more and more impressed with the value of hogs on the farm. Many farmers make their cows the main feature; the buildings are constructed with reference to their management, and the rotation of crops is fixed to promote the same end. We also have farms devoted to horse-breeding, and whole sections of country where sheep-breeding is the leading industry. To make these different branches of husbandry a specialty, is the right course for success. In the great corn districts of the West, hogs are raised in large numbers, but we are forced to say, from observation, that it is generally corn, more than care, which gives the business its degree of success. Often enough corn is wasted if fed with care to fatten the entire stock. The western hog does not fill the entire place for which he was designed. He is simply a condensed corn-crib, with a great many rat holes. This business basis may possibly answer where corn is cheap and land requires no fertilizer, but in the largest portion of this country corn is not so abundant that the farmer can afford to waste it, or is land so rich but that it can become more productive. Hogs should be made a factor of improvement on every farm. We should have swine farms the same as dairy, horse, and sheep farms, with the fields and buildings adapted to them. Hogs should be fed in the fields, with a rotation in their feeding grounds, the same as in crops. In this way, in a few years, the whole farm can be gone over, and every field enriched. There is room here for solid missionary work, both in improving the condition of the pigs and of the people.—[F. D. Curtis in American Agriculturist for December.

'ROUND HOME.

Home made taffy at Herb's Branch.

Choice new sweet cider at Herb's Branch. Call and sample.

District court convenes on Monday, December 8th. There are a large number of criminal cases for this term.

Wheat still hangs fire at 49 for the best. Flour is taking a tumble as will be seen by our ads from the mills elsewhere.

Fine day this week and everybody seems to be improving it getting in wood and hay. Wood is selling on the market from $3 to $4.50.

Pete Cornelius was mourning for his three year old colt a day or so until he heard that it was safely housed at Gentilly, where he found it all O. K.

Louis Berthiaume's many friends will rejoice to learn that he is so far recovered as to be able to be out on the streets on Wednesday. His recovery will be rapid we trust.

Peter Reub has vamoosed the ranch. It is generally remarked that Peter has petered out (as it were) and Shep and the Sheriff are in partnership running Peter's cigar store.

We learn that in the eastern part of the county far less wheat will be sown next spring than ever before. Farmers will pay more attention to summer fallowing next year.

Hugh Robertson was celebrating the arrival of a fine new boy who arrived on Saturday morning, bright and early, to call Hugh pa. The cigars were of he best brand and Hugh dished them out without stint.

W. S. Stockdale, traveling agent for W. R. Nowell & Co., was in the city this week with his wife. He agres with the general verdict that Crookston is the best town on his route for business and for prompt payments.

Come and buy good goods at you own prices, at VAN DYKE & Co's.

Operations at Markham's well have stopped short owing to the fact that bed-rock was reached. Markham don't propose to give it up so. He intends to get a charge of dynamite down and blow the stuffin' out of bed-rock.

The place to buy dry goods at hard pan prices is at the New York store.

Lizzie Evans appeared in Dew Drop on Friday evening last and clinched the good opinions formerly won by her. She is a charming little actress and Harry Warren is another. This troupe deserved a far better house than it got.

For the next 30 days we are bound to sell goods 50 per cent. below cost in order to make room for new stock.

VAN DYKE & Co.

Henry Witty was in from Garfield way on Wednesday and says farmers are complaining about the low price of wheat. Tell 'em to buy and fat hogs with it, Henry, and then they will realize far better prices for their wheat. We must get into the habit of raising more stock.

A fine lot of toilet articles to be sold very low, at VAN DYKE & Co's.

Dave Robinson, after a trip all over Minnesota and part of Dakota has returned, having found no better place than Crookston. He has bought a half interest in Herb Mason's business and may be found at his old stand as usual, ready to deal out taffy to the girls in great chunks.

Close buyers have found out that Hack & Gallasch's store is the place for bargains.

Pete Cornelius seems to be out of luck, somehow. On Saturday last when he returned home from the village he found Old Tom, his best mule, cold and dead, gored to death by his bull. Pete paid $200 for this mule when he bought him and thinks beef at that cost too dear, nevertheless he says he shall beef the hooker.

You can buy a good colored blanket for one dollar, at the New York store.

UNCLE JOSH has awakened from his long sleep and rubbed his eyes, as will be seen by his communication elsewhere. The old sinner, he is after the loaves and fishes it seems by what he writes to his dear friend Brady, while all these years he has been letting on that he was a true-blue Republican. The old rat! We fear that he is not the only one in the same box.

Just received. A car-load of Buggies selected by an experienced carriage-builder all warranted. Call early and select one. McKinnon Bros.

Our Sheriff complains (and with reason) that the jug is too small. Since the steel cells were put in there is less cell room than ever and the prisoners are so crowded that it is not healthy for them although the utmost cleanliness is observed. Our county dads should make arrangements to erect a good and sufficient jail in the court house yard thus uniting convenience with comfort.

Our friends have been responding to our request for settlement on subscription in a manner that is cheering. There are still many to hear from, some of whom we have not heard from for lo these many years. We trust that they will make a personal application of the situation and try to imagine how they would like to wait year after year for their pay if they were in our place. We can imagine that they would not enjoy it any too well. Put yourself in our place and do the best you can.

The best five cent cigars is at the Red Star Grocery, Broadway. [51-tf]

A turkey shoot on the ice Wednesday afforded the boys great fun. One turkey, it is said brought $17 before he was corralled but he must have been altogether too tough for any use.

If you are going to buy a cloak see what they can show you at the New York store.

John Leo has moved his house on Robert Street out in line with his neighbors and we are told intends to move his office therein. John seems to be slinging on lots of agony since his promotion.

Drop into THE JOURNAL office settle up that little subscription and secure two papers for the year. The Farmer is an excellent agricultural paper that should be in every progressive farmer's hands. See prospectus in another column.

While digging a ditch from Markham's well to his house the men dug out a large bone, nine feet beneath the surface, Mr. Markham has decided to "let well enough alone" and will not try to blast the rock with dynamite.

Have you tried the Red Star Grocery House on Broadway to see how cheap you can buy groceries for cash? E. Le Page announces that groceries will be sold in proportion to the price of wheat which means way down. Go and try

Warren Sheaf. We have heard it said that a man gets mad if he is reminded either by local or by a circular through the mail that he is delinquent on his subscription, but we do not take any stock in such reports, and if such is the case, less stock in that kind of men. All MEN who subscribe for a paper expect to pay for it, and if they get behind with their subscriptions, they will not take offence by being reminded of the fact.

Grand Forks had a $30,000 fire on Saturday last. Among the burned buildings was the Plaindealer office. The Herald promptly offered the use of type and presses to help out its unfortunate neighbor which proves that Winship's heart is the biggest portion of his anatomy. Dr. Collins loses a valuable libary by the fire and Dr. Wheeler some valuable surgical instruments.

On Thursday night of last week Eli Asselin, living about 13 miles from this city, was made the object of attentions that were anything but pleasant. Sleeping in his little cabin with his wife and little babe, he was suddenly awakened by the report of a gun. The party thus serenading, after the first salute continued the fusilade until he had wounded both Mr. and Mrs. A. severely. The babe fortunately was not hit. A man named Louis Barrette was subsequently arrested and brought to this city and committed for trial without bail.

LETTER FROM UNCLE JOSH.

ST. HILAIRE, Nov. 22, 1884.

MY DEAR BRADY:

I am just informed that on the result of the election being fully settled, you applied for the registership of the land office at Crookston, and in consideration of steadfast support and great personal services during the dark days of the democracy, your application received favorable consideration. Another report has it that you did not APPLY for the position, but that the President elect, recognizing the valuable services you had rendered him, and was likely to render him in the future, hastened to TENDER you the position as soon as the first 219 was written on the wall. Whichever of these reports are true does not matter so long as you have got the office. The simple matter of difference between asking for and being proffered the perquisites of the office, does not cut much of a figure; its the PERQUISITES we are after, you and I.

I hasten to offer my congratulations, and at the same time to mildly hint that the present is a good opportunity for you to give practical and substantial confirmation to that often expressed friendly regard you have for myself. None can know better than yourself that I have suffered and bled for the good of the party. You can, if you will testify to the amount of blood that I have been compelled to part with, that one of the great central columns of the democratic edifice might be continued on this sublunary sphere, saying nothing about the large sheets of epidermis that have parted company with my [illegible] face, that the pillar aforesaid might reproach itself by participating in a foot race at Grand Forks, and you are well aware that not very long ago I carried the entire person of a democratic candidate on the crown of my barepated, classical head, and tho' I did so both night and day, I have never complained of the weight of the burthen that you at times placed upon me. But the consequences of being found in such company were very grave to myself. I think I have recited to you some of the results to myself when I was discovered in bed with Mr. Baxter. That I had gone to bed with the expectation of-of, well, of good rest when I got ready to rest, how that the other party discovered that there were three of us in bed together, and flatly refused to give a dollar under the circumstances. I scarcely need call your attention to the fact that a thing like rest, once lost, is lost forever, and the memory of such loss remains for the same length of time. All this and much more have I endured for the good of the cause. I do not make mention of these things thinking that you have forgotten them, or any of them, but it does me good to refer to them now that there is a prospect of such great services receiving something like an adequate reward, but all this is preliminary to the important part of my letter. As I have before remarked, I want some of the perquisites. There is a Republican cuss out here who by some mistake has got a first-class claim that I want to jump, because it is all improved and would save me a large amount of expense. Of course with you in the land office the matter could be fixed without delay or trouble to us. In view of the modesty of myself and my demands I feel confident that that particular quarter, with all hereditaments, are mine from the moment you receive this.

LATER. A report has just reached me that you neither requested nor accepted the office of Register when offered by the President, but demanded that the office of Register and Receiver be merged into one and that that one be merged into yourself, and rumor has it that your demand was promptly complied with. Again I congratulate, and I have just made the discovery that there is another black abolitionist who has a fair quarter of land that I would like to go with the other that I spoke about, and as you now have the thing in the shape that Brady is the land office and the land office is Brady, of course there is no sort of chance for the man to hold the land. I shall turn him out and move into his house as soon as I think you have received this letter. By the way, you in your position as autocrat of the land office, can't you manage to pick up a fine piece of Sioux script? If you can, save some out, those that will come into the office. I will locate them for you on some townsite property and give you a good divide.

UNCLE JOSH.

Remember the "Blue Front," corner Main and Second streets.

Fergus Falls Telegram: "It is a mighty good thing for Nelson," said a well known business man yesterday, who never indulges in, but always delights to talk politics, "that there is to be a Democratic president. He can attend strictly to business now and make a good record for his district, as there is no patronage to bother him. The next time there is a vacancy in a post office or land office he will not be chased from Winnipeg to Washington by an army of office seekers, and after he has decided on the man, to find that he is not strong politically, or acceptable to the people, and get a general overhauling for what he has done. He can simply tell them now that he hasn't anything to say and refer them to Pat Kelly for consolation."

Kittson County Enterprise: There will not be nearly the acreage sown to wheat in this vicinity next spring as there was last season. The extremely low price of wheat has caused a "don't-care-a-snap" feeling to settle down in the breasts of a good many of our farmers, and though, undoubtedly the early freeze up has been the chief cause, they don't seem to take it sadly at heart that a large amount of the stubble is not going to be turned over and in readiness for the seed next spring. There is hardly a farmer but that is convinced that the time is here when he must make a strenuous effort to diversify his farming, and next year will see far more attention paid to the raising of stock than ever before in the valley. The millers' ring hasn't got a corner on hogs.

Waseca Radical: Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Pillsbury, the rich Minneapolis miller, gave a grand reception at the new magnificent West hotel, Minneapolis, last week. The affair was up to the top notch, with no limit to expense. The invited guests numbered 1,000, and not one of them was a 50-cent wheat grower we will guarantee. We suppose it's a rich man's privilege to spend his money as he pleases, but some way it does look hard, in these days of trials for laboring people, and farmers selling wheat at 50 cents, to see the man who buys the wheat getting rich enough to give parties after the Vanderbilt and Astor style. It may be legally right, but it does seem as if there was an injustice somewhere, and a screw loose somewhere.

Grandview Stock Farm.

Farmers Tribune: The purchase of a half interest in A. G. Wilcox's Grandview Stock Farm by Col. W. M. Liggett, who hails from Union County, Central Ohio, in a locality famous for stock in that famous stock growing State, is a matter of more than ordinary significance. Col. Liggett is no ordinary man, having been prominent in his own country in policies and business for many years. Opportunities were open to him which are not often offered to men in the older States, but after carefully looking over the prospects in Minnesota he decided to remove there and identify himself with the stock men and business interests of Swift County. This is a substantial compliment and means that shrewd observers recognize the fact that a stock boom is coming in Minnesota, and that those who are ready to supply the demand as it grows will make money in the business. Grandview farm winters 250 head of horses and cattle. Its specialties are imported and graded Norman horses, Friesian or Holstein and Shorthorn cattle, Oxforddown sheep, and we predict that Grandview herds will be heard from among the prize winners next fall.

We find in the Minneapolis Farmers' Tribune the following excellent advice to those who are about to engage in stock-raising which will be found profitable if duly heeded:

Do not expect to make a fortune off your cows the first year you are engaged in the business. You cannot do it, because it is not within the range of possibilities to do so. Be diligent, persevering, careful and regular in matters pertaining to the business and you will succeed. We know that the farmer who devotes himself to the dairy business, with the expectation of making a success out of it, must not expect to spend much of his time away from the farm. It requires close, personal attention, much more so than wheat raising, and without it, no one will be able to make it pay.

Feed liberally, and raise all you feed. The dairymen in Wisconsin and Illinois say "feed liberally, raise all your own feed, and feed all you raise." The maxim is a good one for them, and we think it a good one for dairymen in this State.

Provide warm shelter for the cows, and therein will be found one of the avenues to success. No cow can make milk when she is half starved and half frozen. It does not stand to reason. It is a pleasure to note that in the dairy section of the State, or on the farms exclusively devoted to dairying, that a vast improvement has been made in the care of stock in winter. The Tribune earnestly hopes the improvement will continue until all have provided themselves with good shelter for their herds.

Sweet corn can be grown cheaply, and it makes an excellent forage crop for cows, helps the milk flow at a season of the year when the pastures begin to fail and when the flies prevent the cows from getting a full feed in the field or on the range, cut it twenty-four or forty-eight hours before feeding, let it wilt, and feed night and morning. It can be grown without fear of frost, for it is fed before the ear matures. It has long been prized by Illinois and Iowa dairymen as the best forage crop that can be raised.

These and other notes of warning which may suggest themselves to the intelligent farmer, if observed by him, will enable him to surmount many of the seeming difficulties that beset the path of a new beginner in dairying. To the resolute these obstacles melt away like the snow before the morning sun. These and greater ones have been overcome by the dairymen in other states, and we firmly believe they will disappear here. Work systematically and intelligently, and the battle will be easily won. Study the condition of the cow, the feed, the corn, and note if it becomes necessary to make any change in the feed. Don't neglect the water, no matter how cold or wet the weather may be. Cows want water every day, and some require a great deal. With a determination to succeed, go in and do your best; profit by the mistakes of your neighbors, and learn from those who have been successful, and by your individual effort help to make Minnesota one of the greatest, if not the greatest, dairy State in the Union, and your reward will come in the shape of better farms, better buildings, better herds and more money.

A Hint to Farmers.

The Experience of Senator Hill Demonstrates That it Does Pay to Raise Cattle in Minnesota.

Brainerd, Special Correspondence to the Pioneer Press, Nov. 19.—There is still so much unoccupied land in Northern Minnesota that its value for cattle purposes, as well as for cereals—or indeed of more value than for cereals—is a matter of consequence. As is well known, Senator James Hill of Wisconsin and his partner, E. D. Childs, purchased in '78 ten thousand acres of the Manitoba Railroad company, not far from Crookston, and their success with that land, and with cattle and hogs and wheat and barley, as well as with one of J. J. Hill's curly-headed bulls, are matters of such importance to the general reader in Minnesota that I venture to ask space to tell the story. So far as the general value of the prairie farms is concerned, the fact that one section purchased at $1,000 can be sold to-day for $50,000 is of no consequence, for that is accidental circumstance, the gentlemen having built the town of Carman, which is across the river from Crookston, on a section of the 10,000 acres. It is of more consequence to know that the farming acres, at a distance from the town, are of value for stock raising and keeping. I might as well say that at an early stage they purchased some fancy Jersey stock which an amateur farmer from Minneapolis had at his farm near Crookston. Senator Hill is satisfied that Jersey cows are good for milk and butter, and they are picturesque near a farm house. But the farmer who will succeed must have an eye to beef as well as to milk and butter. And so the senator and Mr. Childs are going to abandon the pretty Jersey cow. When Mr. J. J. Hill's uncommonly sensible as well as beneficent offer was made of furnishing valuable imported bulls for the cattle raisers of the Red River Valley, his namesake senator applied for one and got it. The regulations are that the service of the bull shall be given each farmer only once in the season, but that in four years all restrictions will be removed, and that then the animal will become the property of him who had charge of it. Thus in four years the senator will own the curly headed bull, the influence of which will no doubt be felt for good for all time on the stock in Minnesota.

[illegible]

The senator's beginning was on a small scale, but the increase and growth of his herd has equaled the increase of cattle in any part of the country. His barn yard has an area of four acres, and is surrounded by a high and close fence. He has a flowing well of good water, and has no trouble with the stock. He has a grist-mill, operated by the portable engine of the threshing engine of the threshing season. His barley and "shorts" of wheat and milk, he throws into pork, and now he is going to experiment with hams and shoulders. The firm have seeded down within a year or two a great deal of land for grazing. It has been held by many that cattle cannot be raised or held to advantage in the northern part of the State, but here is an authentic story from a practical man. I have said that the gentlemen-farmers have flowing wells. That fact may be of interest to some of your readers; and further, that a two-inch pipe, driven, and cleaned out from time to time, is the mode the senator adopts after many experiments with larger pipes and other methods.

The American Agriculturist for December, 1884, rounds out the year with most superb illustrations, an a very inviting table of contents. The cover is one of great beauty, while numerous full-page and other illustrations to the number of ninety, by Bennett, Forbes, Folsom, and other well known artists, add to the attractiveness of the number. Joseph Harris tells what he saw on a long Western tour, from which he has just returned.....Colonel Weld writes on milk fever, Devon oxen, mutton and milk.....A. S. Fuller illustrates remarkable varieties of pecan-nuts.....F. D. Coburn argues that mule raising is profitable in the West... Chester P. Dewey describes a visit to the home of Seth Green, the noted fish culturist..... S. B. Reed gives plans and estimates for a convenient cottage costing $1,500 .....E. A. Long illustrates plans and designs of crooked and straight paths .....Dr. Halsted writes on rust, mildew in wheat, and the fall army worm..... James Sheehan contributes a paper on the care of house plants. There are numerous other articles from well-known writers.....The household department is usually full, and abounds in descriptions of suitable holiday presents .....The christmas story for the young people is unusually entertaining, and the humbug column fairly bristles this month. Indeed every page of the December American Agriculturist is bright and interesting, with superior engravings and thoroughly prepared descriptive matter. Price $1.50 per year, single numbers 15 cts. Address Publishers of the American Agriculturist, 751 Broadway, New York.

A Great Newspaper.

The Pall Mall Gazette, of London, England, did not overstate the case when it said that The New York Independent is "one of the ablest weeklies in existence." It is as overwhelming as a monthly or quarterly magazine, with all the matter in its many departments. Any monthly might indeed be proud if it could show as distinguished a list of contributors as The Independent. In a single department—its story department—we find, among Englishmen, such contributors as Sir Samuel W. Baker, the celebrated Egyptian explorer; Thomas Hardy, W. E. Norris, James Payn, F. W. Robinson and Henry W. Lucy, the well-known and deservedly popular novelists; while among Americans we notice the names of Edward Everett Hale, Frank R Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Sarah O. Jewett, J. S., of Dale, Rebecca Harding Davis and Harriet Prescott Spofford. The Independent printed also, recently, the last story from the pen of the late Ivan Tourgeneff, having secured the only translation from the Russian into English. This department is but a sample of the others. It would seem to us that The Independent offers not only "fifty-two dividends during the year," but, in addition, a stock dividend with each department. We advise our readers to send for a free sample copy. [29-32]

Better than Wheat.

St. Paul Globe: It is coming to be believed that even with fair prices for wheat there are other productions for which the southern part of the territory is more profitably adapted. This statement made by Mr. Jones, a leading farmer of that vicinity, given to the Sioux Falls Press, is in point:

"It is unnecessary to mutiply words to prove the question in the affirmative. All that I would offer is, that I have not raised any wheat for a number of years and yesterday I sold nearly $1,400 worth of live hogs in this city and have plenty more left and oceans of corn to feed them with."

We dare say there is not a granger in this section who has stuck to wheat during the years Mr. Jones has been giving his attention to growing corn and cribbing it in hogs who can market $1,400 worth of small grain and have "plenty more left" as a reserve to tide over a poor year. The idea that wheat is the paying crop of this section is being pretty well exploded, and the sooner the wheat fields are turned into corn fields and hog pastures, the sooner our farmers will part company with poverty. This is a corn and stock country. It was proven so to the satisfaction of every intelligent inhabitant of this region the present year. Corn Jones' transaction above referred to is incontrovertible proof in substantiation of the assertion.

Must Be Stopped.

A correspondent writes the Fargo Argus thusly:

"It is said that a prominent grain commission house of Minneapolis recently received a letter from Pillsbury & Hulbert Elevator Company, in which was said substantially as follows:

'You have a fellow who is buying our tickets at Grandin and paying one to one and a half cent per bushel more than we are paying. This is raising h—l with farmers and it must be stopped!"

It appears that the last clause in the original letter is strongly underlined as if to be very emphatic. If this be true, and it seems to be pretty well authenticated, is it not high time that the farmers of the Northwest have some legislation for their protection? Is it not time for them to demand and see that they have an open market? Are the splendid fields of the Northwest only operated as adjuncts to the warehouses of the wheat receiver? Are the farmers simply beasts of burden serving them? Are these warehouse operators to be permitted to ruin the fairest lands upon which the sun has ever shone, merely for the gratification of their own avarice and the aggrandizement of their own fortunes? What do the farmers think about it? As an evidence of good faith the names of the parties above referred to are furnished you herewith.

Fargo Argus: Information is beginning to be had confirmatory of the anticipations of The Argus, that in the great winter wheat districts the farmers have largely reduced the acreage sown to wheat. There are as yet no reports from the State Boards of Agriculture; but estimates are had from farmers and gentlemen who have traveled extensively and given the subject special investigation. The decrease in Illinois is put as high as forty per cent. below the average of recent years. In Indiana and Ohio it is reported somewhat less, but large. It is believed that all the winter regions will show a very material falling off, which will be more accurately indicated when the reports of the local boards are furnished. The indications now are that the shrinkage in acreage of winter wheat in the country will be considerably more than twenty-five per cent. With the same yield as the past year this will represent a decrease of production of about 100,000,000 bushels, which, without counting the reduction probable in other countries, will cut off all the surplus above the demands for present markets. In many sections the poor grade of wheat are being used to fatten hogs and feed stock. In the spring it will no doubt be found that there is comparatively little wheat held in the country above the usual supply. In addition, should it appear that the winter had seriously damaged the growing crop, there would inevitably be a rapid advance in prices. The indications are more than hopeful that a few months hence will see wheat in demand at profitable figures.

Hay for Stock.

Farmers Tribune: The Northwest abounds in excellent varieties of both tame and wild hay. This is one reason why we have our stock in such excellent condition in the spring. From experiments which have been made in regard to the comparative value of hay for stock, it is well ascertained that 100 pounds of good hay is equal to 275 pounds of green Indian corn, 400 pounds of green clover, 442 pounds of rye straw, 350 pounds of wheat straw, 160 pounds of oat straw, 180 pounds of barley straw, 153 pounds of pea straw, 200 pounds of buckwheat straw, 400 pounds of dried corn stalks, 170 pounds of raw potatoes, 504 pounds of turnips, 300 pounds of carrots, 54 pounds of rye, 46 pounds of wheat 59 pounds of oats, 45 pounds of mixed peas and beans, 64 pounds of buckwheat, 57 pounds of Indian corn, 68 pounds of acorns, 105 pounds of wheat bran, 167 pounds of wheat, pea and oat chaff, 179 pounds of mixed rye and barley, 69 pounds of linseed, and 339 pounds of mangel wurzel. These experiments abundantly prove that hay during the winter months is the natural food of all kinds of stock, but when mixed with roots, grain or meal and fed to cattle, horses or sheep—there are many fattening qualities added to the food.

Fine Beeves.

Grand Forks Herald: Peter Estensen Wednesday, sold in this city nine head of cattle weighing 9,620 pounds. They were fat and rotund, having been raised near Belmont, Polk County, Minnesota, and were fair samples of what farmers may do in stock, as he raised them from calves. It is needless to say that he got a good price for the lot and will realize handsomely on all he may wish wish to sell in this market. There is no danger of over-production in this line, as there is said to be in wheat raising. For ten years to come our farmers will hardly raise more stock than there will be a demand for at good prices.

Farming Still a Success.

Detroit Surprise: No one should be discouraged because wheat is low, or feel that farming is by any means played out. That poor farming has been unsuccessful, and has in many cases ruined those who thought they were good farmers, is most too true; but those that have raised all that could be raised on the farm for self consumption and sale, do not find themselves in the bad fix which the other class do. Those who have raised all in their line, find it much easier to get money to pay up the mortgage on the farm, and make gradual payments on their machinery, than those who have taken the other course. Farming is still a success with good farmers, and a fall in the market of any one kind of produce they may raise, cannot cripple them—they will sell that which is the most profitable, and wait for the other to rise in the market. Always having a living, their surplus is at their control and beyond reach of the speculator to force.

Warm Stables vs. Blankets.

Farmers Tribune: The health of a horse, like that of a man, depends very much upon a natural system of life. Artificial systems require double the care, and however sleek the horse may look under a heavy coating of blankets and an occasional medical "dope," his capacity for endurance is much less than that of a horse which, however rough he may look, has nerves and endurance built only upon regular, natural food and exposure to the varied changes of the atmosphere.

It may be all very well for the fancy to clip the hair all off from the horse, and then cover him with clothing in order to have his coat look fine and smooth, but it will not do for the horse of all work. Nature has provided a covering, and where use as designed, the horse needs only that with good grooming and a warm stable, or, if a blanket is ever used, let it be done when the horse is left standing out of doors in harness.

Make the stables as warm as a dirt floor or battened boarding will permit, give plenty of bedding, and with abundance of food the horse is better able to stand labor and exposure than if kept on a board floor where cold air circulates underneath and covered with blankets. Our experience is in favor of dirt floors without blankets. Dirt floors well littered are no more trouble to keep neat and clean than board floors, and no stable with a dirt floor and decently boarded up will ever be cold enough to cause a horse to shiver.

More About Weights.

A correspondent to the Fargo Argus says:

"I am told that the agents of some of the elevator companies give bonds that their grades and weights shall hold out. Can this be true. It does not seem credible, and yet it is true. It helps to explain how a wealthy owner of elevator stock can afford to lose a small fortune in a gambling enterprise and still have a princely income remaining. They force somebody else to take all the risks while they go to the trouble of pocketing the profits. Do you suppose that is the way? What an incentive to an elevator agent to be honest. If he makes a mistake in grading by which the farmer benefits, he has only to make a "mistake" against the next farmer to set all things right. If he has any doubts about his weights holding out he has only to practice with his scales until he becomes an expert in weighing to his own and to his employers interests.

But how do the farmers like it? Oh the farmers are only permitted to produce the grain They have nothing to say as to how their crops shall be handled. One agent tells a farmer that he musn't "kick" unless he wants to be robbed. And the farmer endures the present ills, fearing lest he shall fly to worse ones.

One of the latest excuses given by an elevator employe for deducting forty pounds from a farmer's load was that the wind was blowing against the wagon when the weight was taken, and allowance must be made for that. It seems like a great deal of wind to be in one load of wheat. But when it isn't the wind it is something else. Now is there any reason when a farmer takes forty-five bushels of wheat to the elevator that he should receive tickets for only thirty-five. The elevator man says that this ten bushels will be taken out in cleaning. The farmer knows that, even if the grain was thoroughly cleaned, which it will not be, not over two or three bushels will be taken from his wheat, and that the screenings will be worth something; but he must not kick. Like the animal that Balaam beat, he must have patience. The question now is, isn't that patience about all gone?"

Farmers' Clubs.

The Journal has often urged the importance of farmers' clubs and the following is what the American Dairyman has to say upon the subject:

Can farmers improve their condition by organization? Is there anything to be gained by association? In our opinion, to hold the negative of the question, is to say you know it all, that no man can teach you any thing. On the face of it this is absurd. There is much to be learned by all men in associating together. Especially is this the case with farmers who live so far apart. They have no opportunity for exchanging ideas except through the mediumship of assciations. Merchants as a rule, can talk with one another, but even they find it to their advantage to have "Exchanges" where they can meet daily and exchange ideas upon the articles in which they deal. Why, then, should farmers neglect to do that which the keenest traders in the world find to be to their advantage? While it is true that farmers could not well meet often in summer, when they had their crops to attend to, yet there is no such reason at this season of the year for keeping them apart. Now they should come together and exchange thoughts upon the current topics of the day that most closely touch upon their own interests.

A Great Newspaper.

The Pall Mall Gazette, of London, England, did not overstate the case when it said that The New York Independent is "one of the ablest weeklies in existence." It is as overwhelming as a monthly or quarterly magazine, with all the matter in its many departments. Any monthly might indeed be proud if it could show as distinguished a list of contributors as The Independent. In a single department—its story department—we find, among Englishmen, such contributors as Sir Samuel W. Baker, the celebrated Egyptian explorer; Thomas Hardy, W. E. Norris, James Payn, F. W. Robinson and Henry W. Lucy, the well-known and deservedly popular novelists; while among Americans we notice the names of Edward Everett Hale, Frank R Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Sarah O. Jewett, J. S., of Dale, Rebecca Harding Davis and Harriet Prescott Spofford. The Independent printed also, recently, the last story from the pen of the late Ivan Tourgeneff, having secured the only translation from the Russian into English. This department is but a sample of the others. It would seem to us that The Independent offers not only "fifty-two dividends during the year," but, in addition, a stock dividend with each departme. We advise our readers to send for a free sample copy.

Polk County Journal.

Crookston, Minn., Thursday, Dec. 4.

December came in as mild as a lamb.

Mr. D. H. Beecher, was in the city this week from Park River, D. T.

The Fargo Argus says that the immigration boom will strike this country next spring bigger than ever. So mote it be.

Congress convened on Monday. The probabilities are that not much business beyond passing appropriation bills will be done.

Wheat took a bit of a jump last week reaching 52 for No. 1 Hard. It eased off a bit and sold this week at 51 cents for No. 1 Hard.

Charlie Vance was down from his school in Rockstad this week, returning on Tuesday. He is teaching a term of two months this winter.

"On Nov. 29th, at the M. E. parsonage in Grand Forks, by the Rev. F. Doran, Mr. S. A. Wilkenson to Miss Viola Bartean, both of Crookston, Minn."

Theo. Greenhalgh is reported to be lying very sick at his father's residence east of the city. We trust that it may not prove serious and that he will soon be out around again.

Dr. Just, who is attending Theodore Greenhalgh, reports Theo. very much better on Tuesday, and improving slowly. This is indeed encouraging news for Theodore's many friends.

Frank Lytle is a bachelor ad interim. Not only is Cleveland elected, sure enough, but his wife, (Frank's) and child have gone east to New York for a visit, and yet he (Frank) is not happy. Sich is life.

The following item from the Grand Forks Herald of Monday Dec. 1st will be found interesting to the many friends of the parties in this city to some of whom it will be somewhat of a surprise.

Elsewhere will be seen a call to the members of Post No. 90 G. A. R., to be at the lodge rooms on Friday evening next. It is earnestly desired that all should be there as important business is to be transacted.

I have got ten first-class sewing machines that I will close out at cost before January 1st, 1885. Any one wishing a good machine will do well to call at once and look them over.

[32-34] E. M. Walsh.

Annie E., wife of Alexander Ramsey, died at St. Paul on Saturday, Nov. 29th, aged 59. Ex-Gov. Alexander Ramsey is one of the best known and most influential men in the State, and numbers his friends by thousands.

Indications are very flattering for another railroad into this great Red River Valley at an early day. It is said that several great railroad corporations have an eye upon us and some one of them will come this way erelong.

G. W. Lemley, of Barnesville is spending the week with A. P. Bond in this city. Although he has a large opinion of the future importance of Barnesville yet he cannot refrain from complimenting us highly on our own solid city.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira D. Blanchard are called upon to watch with unceasing care over a very sick child, a little girl that is afflicted with dropsy and heart disease. It's life was despaired of on Sunday but it rallied somewhat on Tuesday. The doctor can give them but little encouragement to hope for its ultimate recovery.

Jas. W. Girvin, representing Preston & Nott, manufacturers and dealers in leather and rubber belting and all kinds of rubber goods, was in the city last week interviewing the C. F. D. with a view to selling a supply of hose. The city contracted for 1,000 feet of the best hose which is warranted to give perfect satisfaction.

Mr. A. Anderson, of Ridgeway, Iowa, arrived on Tuesday to look after his interests in this county. He says that times in Iowa, as well as here, are extremely dull. Corn and pork, the chief productions, are very low, corn selling at 35 cents per bushel and hogs 3½ cents per pound, live weight. He goes to Grafton, D. T, to-day for a few weeks.

The Grand Forks Herald says that Z. M. Hunt, of Huntsville, Polk Co., met with a terrible accident on Sunday. He was hunting rabbits, and standing on a log watching for them his gun slipped the hammer striking the log and discharging the contents of the gun into Mr. Hunt's left thigh. He was taken to Grand Forks for medical treatment. The wound is pronounced of a very serious nature.

Representative elect, Canning was up on Tuesday. He is on a tour among his constituents to see about what their ideas are as to what is to be done at the coming session of the Legislature in relation to the question that most seriously affects this great Northwest. He is now in Marshall and Kittson Counties and on his return will stop awhile in Polk County. The first thing to be done should be the organization of at least one Association in every county in this district which association should undertake the work that is to be done in the district while our representative is attending to his duties at the front. The work to be done will require the united efforts of all concerned and this matter should receive the attention that is due it at the coming Farmers' Mass Convention.

Don't forget to drop in at the Excelsior and see the bargains in clothing offered.

Best Patent Flour $2.25 per hundred lbs. at Hack & Gallasch.

Mr. J. H. Kling has gone to New York and Boston on business for the Crookston Roller Mills.

Hack & Gallasch have a large stock of winter goods, which they must sell by Jan. 1st 85. Call and see them and buy for $1.00 what will cost you $1.50 elsewhere.

H. B. Montgomery, Vice-President of the new Merchant's National Bank is in the city for a few days.

Wheat is going up but prices remains as low as ever at Hack & Gallasch.

Frank Adams came in from the logging camps on the Clearwater last week. He has accepted a position at the new rink.

A new stock of photograph and autograph albums selling very cheap at M. Van Dyke & Co's.

The new rink opened up in good shape on Tuesday night. Hundreds were in attendance and a good time was hugely enjoyed by all.

Fine stationery a specialty at M. Van Dyke & Co's.

Mr. W. D. Bailey was in last week from the logging camps on the Clearwater. He reports business flourishing with good snow for skidding purposes.

The balance of our Japanese goods we will sell at 50 per cent below first cost, M. Van Dyke & Co.

Dr. Cable has his neat little office on Broadway nicely furnished and it is the nicest cosiest little place to sit down in unless you want a tooth extracted and then—Oh my,

Van Dyke & Co's Star Drug Store is fast becoming the popular drug store of Crookston. Hank says that since they have put in the electric light that he can see so well that he can make prices so low that everybody will buy.

The ladies of the Episcopal church will give one of their popular entertainments on Thursday evening Dec. 11th at the Favorite rink. Supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock and then skating will be in order. All are cordially invited.

We would say to the people of Crookston and vicinity that we have received our Christmas and New Year's cards, the finest ever brought to this city, which we will sell at a very low figure, M. Van Dyke & Co.

Fred Schwark won the suit of clothes offered by the Excelsior Clothing House for the closest guess on the electoral vote. He estimated Cleveland's vote at 219 and he won the clothes, (and Cleveland gets the [illegible] b' gum.

Dave Williams intends soon to move to Barnesville. That place will be made division headquarters which means that still there's more to follow of the railroad boys. As a general rule they do not relish the idea of leaving Crookston.

Mr. L. B. Branch, of Alexandria paid the Journal a pleasant visit on Saturday last: His offer to supply wood and bob-sleds, elsewhere in this issue is a good one and all in need of those articles will do well to correspond with him. His wood is of the best and his sleds warranted.

The Merchant's bank in this city on Monday morning commenced doing business under the name of the Merchant's National bank, John Cromb, President, H. B. Montgomery, Vice President, Wm. Ross, Cashier. This bank has had a marvelous growth showing that our city has all of the essential elements of greatness within her.

Notice the change in the big ad of the Excelsior Clothing house this week. This house is to be consolidated with the C. O. D. clothing house and be moved into the old Chiniquy store on Main St., on Jan. 1st. Meanwhile you can buy a suit at your own figures almost. They will sell at wholesale cost figures. Go and test them.

Mr. Hopkins Stone, of Argyle, Marshall Co., dropped in on Wednesday evening to gladden the heart of the printer with a little of the where-with-al. Mr. Stone reports most of the wheat in his neighborhood sold but all who can do so are holding for better prices. He intends to spend the winter with friends at his old home in Michigan.

A company has been formed, called the Red River Lumber Company, with Mr. T. B. Walker at its head whose object is to build mills and manufacture pine lumber. Mr. W. we learn has a large supply of logs left over from last year and will cut several millions more this winter which renders his present sawing capacity quite inadequate albeit he can cut 20,000,000 in the mill now built. One or two more will be needed.

Attention Company!

You are hereby notified and commanded to be and appear and each then and there to answer to your own several individual name individually at the post rooms of Post No. 90 G. A. R., on Friday night Dec. 5th, 1884 and hereof fail you not under supreme penalty of the law in such cases made and provided. Street Sayings.

"Why don't you tell the whole world what lovely weather we are having just now?" said Judge Reynold's to our reporter on Wednesday. "Why, if people only knew what a lovely country this Red River Valley is, they would all want to come here," And then the Judge indulged in reminiscences showing that we never do have quite so bad weather as further south. "But you may just tell 'em," continued he, "that there is no use trying to get rich raising wheat. Wheat raising alone will kill any country. I was born and raised in wheat countries, and I never saw any country wholly devoted to wheat raising that was not poor as Job's turkey. The fact is, farmers will never learn this truth until it is beaten into them, and this year it is pretty effectually beaten into them. The result will be more summer fallowing and I am glad of it, That and more stock is all that this country needs to be one of the best in the world."

"Well," said Esq. Lilly, "I guess you won't see such a general upheaval in offices under Cleveland as you may think. Now, in our post office, Geo. McLean makes an A No. 1 deputy, does good honest work, and I would like to see him called upon to step up higher. He is worthy, well qualified and deserves it. As to the Land Office, when you suggest a better man for Register than John Cromb you just write and let me know. I don't know where he lives, and I should kick on John's going out unless it should be to make him Judge in the new district to be created. Yes, Judge Reynolds would be a good man for the place, and there are also other good men suggested. But don't you let civil service reform disturb your equinamity for a moment. I went to the new rink last night and it is the boss place to go at."

'Now let me tell you," said Geo. J. McManus, "If the Democratic party goes to work to turn everything topsy turvey, I shall begin to think that all this talk you hear about civil service reform is only for campaign purposes. But I don't anticipate that they will."

"Well, there is one consolation about it," said A. P. Bond, "whatever Cleveland does he can't turn me out of my office, anyhow, My rent is paid ahead and business in law and real estate is good, very good this fall, and don't you forget it."

Farmers' Mass Convention.

A Convention of the farmers of Polk County is hereby called to meet at the city hall in the city of Crookston on Wednesday Dec. 17th 1884 at 2 o'clock p. m., to discuss plans of action for the coming Legislative session and other important matters that will be brought before the convention. We have agitated this wheat matter for over a year, we have elected a representative upon that issue and now if we would not have our labor in vain we should formulate some line of action for that representative to follow. Let every farmer in Polk County, who is interested in the wheat business, and every farmer is, more or less, be in attendance at that meeting. [32-33]

FARMERS' CLUBS.

We have often urged upon farmers the importance of forming farmers' clubs and we always like to see what others think of it. Speaking of the formation of Farmers' Associations the Iowa Farm Journal says:

"We suggest that this will be a good time to organize farmers' clubs. In every township or school district there should be no trouble in organizing these clubs for the purpose of discussing matters of interest to the farm. Politics and religion should be excluded. There is no lack of questions of interest. The grass question in all its bearings, including best kinds, time of sowing, manner of sowing, time of cutting, comparative values and adaptation to soils, with yields and value of aftermath. The corn question including best varieties, to harrow or not to harrow, to plow deep or shallow, to cultivate shallow or hill up, to cut or top, or let stand, to feed, in the ear or shelled, or shocked, or ground. The best breed of hogs for the average farmer, with methods of feeding times of breeding with reports of weights at given ages and gains, with methods of feeding, age, breed, etc.

The cow question should come up with butter making, pig feeding and calf raising attachments. Then there is the transportation question and the best method of making the grangers' voice felt in the legislature.

If this matter of farmers' clubs was properly worked up, the governor and state officers and members of the state legislature would lend their ear to the slightest whisper from the prairies, and the farmers would rule Iowa indeed, no matter what political party was in power. All that is needed is intelligent discussion—the politicians will take the trail no matter what party they belong to.

Whatever wrongs and hardships the farmer may have to endure it grew out of this one fact: that he does not know exactly what he wants and never will till he organizes clubs and discusses questions that interest him and is ready to formulate his demands in so direct a way that the politicians know that he means business."

Warranted by the Facts..

St. Paul Globe: The impression is quite general among the wheat growers and some others that this view taken by the Mandan Pioneer is warranted by the facts; "The millers of the northwest are altogether too greedy. They want too much profit. They are developing the spirit of Jesurun of whom we read in the Bible, who waxed fat and kicked. They get about three times as much profit as any one else, and they are the only men in the community who show no disposition whatever to meet half way, the families who are suffering from the general depression of business. The Bismarck mill, for example, pays less for wheat and charges more for flour than the mill in Jamestown; The Jamestown mill is more grasping than Valley City, Valley City than Fargo, and so on to the far east. "But," says some one, "millers are not to blame for getting all they can for their manufactures," Are they not? If this principle holds good, then why are we, the millers and the farmers, blaming the railroad companies of the country for charging all that their freight will bear?"

THE DIFFERENCE.

32 1-2 lbs. of Bread to the Barrel of Flour In Favor of the Red River Valley No. 1 Hard Flint Wheat.---What an Expert in

The St. Paul Pioneer Press says:

An important comparative test was made in this city last week, by Mr. Eugene Mehl, of the Hotel Lafayette, and proprietor of the Cafe Brevoort, Saint Paul, as between the yields in breads, made from Winter Wheat Roller Patent Flour, manufactured in St Louis, and Fancy Patent Flour, manufactured at the Valley Roller Mills, Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, from the hard flint wheat of the Red River Valley. By this test the superior quality of the wheat grown in that great valley is made manifest as the following report will show:

SAINT PAUL, Nov. 20, 1884.

MESSRS. LEE & HERRICK, Proprietors Valley Roller Mills, Crookston, Minn.

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with your request, I have made a comparative test in baking of your Fancy Patent Flour, made at your mills in Crookston, Minnesota, with the Roller Patent Flour, manufactured in St. Louis, Mo., from winter wheat, and the following are its exact comparative results:

48 pounds of your Patent Flour was made into 54 loaves of dough. It was baked, and yielded 62 pounds of bread. 48 pounds of the Patent Flour made in St. Louis was made into 54 loaves of dough, and baked in the same oven, and yielded 54 pounds of bread. The bread made from your flour was a little whiter than the bread made from the St. Louis Flour. The comparative difference, therefore, in your favor would be about thirty-two and one-half pounds (32½) to a barrel of 196 pounds of flour.

I therefore beg leave to congratulate you in the extraordinary yield of your flour, as well the quality of bread it makes.

Yours respectfully,

—EUGENE MEHL.

By the above it will be seen that instead of our farmers getting less for their wheat than is realized for other and softer wheats, they ought to get more. Will the time ever come when the producer will obtain his rights?

One More Unfortunate!

Oh, ho, yes, we tumble! Not long since Bro. R. D. Hoskins, of the Bathgate Sentinel was bragging of a bran new "type-writer" he had just "bought." He said so much about it that he really excited our curiosity to see the "masheen" and now it pans out that he has taken unto himself a better-half? Well, well, Hoskins, that's all right and we congratulate you if you did come pretty near "selling" us. "Type-writer," indeed! Why, hang it man we have had one for lo these many years but did not realize that we had a "type-writer" until you spoke. But we can assure you, old hoss, they are milley handy to have around though we never herd 'em called "type-writers" before. Good boy! We are glad you have got so good a one. You amply deserve it.

LETTER FROM UNCLE JOSH.

ST. HILAIRE, Dec. 1, 1884.

MY DEAR BRADY:

Yours of Nov. 29th is received and contents noted. You astonish me when you say you do not take immediate possession of the land office. You say that there is some hitch in the matter that will have to be adjusted before your appointment to the office can be confirmed. You say that Grover advises you that a general overturning of the civil service would alarm the whole country, and that such changes as are made must be brought about gradually, and that he has on more mature consideration of the matter, concluded that he would wait until some of the campaign exuberance (I suppose that is what we call booze) has had time to settle down and cool off before making his appointments. I am glad that you consider that it will be only a matter of time and that in the end you will be installed in land office, or rather that the land office will be installed in you. I should not regard this delay in the consummation of our desires of any consequence if it was absolutely certain that you would be eventually the sole and only occupant of the L. O. tripod, because we could occupy the intervening time in looking up suitable and advantageous locations on which to place OUR scrip and worthy charities with which to endow with the surplus money that will come into OUR hands. I say OUR for of course you, under the circumstances, expect to divide with me. But from the tone of your letter I mistrust that you are doubtful, and you blame me for what you call my precipitancy in ousting those two black Republicans from their claims. I don't see how you can blame me—didn't you and all the rest of the Democratic leaders tell us that if we stuck to the party that as sood as Cleveland was elected we shou'd have better times? and ain't he elected, and have we got to wait until he is elected for the second term before we get better times? What in hades do you mean, anyhow? Do you suppose we are going to wait until we are in our graves before we begin to derive some benefit from this great Democratic victory? not much, not if the court knows herself. You don't need to preach patience to me: I can give you longer lessons in that science than you have ever dreamed of.

You say I had better return the claims to the parties from whom I have taken them, as it may make trouble for you and myself. Now, that is impossible. In the first place, no Democrat from the great and good Floyd down to the lowest Democratic voter in this Democratic United States, ever gave up what he had once got into his possession; and if it was possible for me to so far forget the principles inculcated by the long line of Democratic celebrities, including Jeff Davis, et. al., as to return to those Blainites the land that I ought, by all means, to have had in the first place. It would in this instance be impossible for me to do so, and you need not fear that they will ever trouble us in the future. You see these fellows thought, or pretended that they thought, that they had as good a right to the land as I had. (What an absurd idea.) Of course I did not waste words on such ignorant cattle, but pitched them into the well, head first, and they have not come back to argue the case with me as yet, and I don't think they will very soon. Of course this little game of mine has deprived the Republicans of two votes, and is as good as four for the Democrats at the next election, but I won't ask for any reward just now; we can arrange about that matter some time after you have come into your inheritance, i. e. the land office.

I was just about to seal the above and mail it to you, when I received yours of Dec. 1st, in which you say that the whole thing has gone to pot. I knew it! I knew it! I told you so! That is just the way I expected it would turn out, any way; that is just like the lop-sided, lantern-jawed long-eared Democracy, any way. They lead you to think that if you help them they will help you. They make you believe that it is a sort of "you scratch my back and I will scratch your back" arrangement. They always manage to get their back scratched first and then slip out of the duty of scratching yours, That's the way they do business, but they don't fool your old uncle in that way. I generally manage to rake in the seads from both sides, and if you have not done the same thing all I have got to say is that you are badly left, and you are a disgrace to your family as well as to your party.

Well, so the land office game is played out, and we are no better off than we were before the great victory. So be it. There is some consolation to be derived at least so far as I am concerned—I didn't vote for their bull-necked, Beecher-boosted candidate, any how. Well, good bye. If you got short of vegetables this winter, I can send you some of the turnips I captured on those claims.

A Farmer's Rhyming Protest.

[Fargo Argus.]

The mills of the gods grind slow,
And they grind exceedingly small,
But the mills of the millers how fast they go,
And the blood of the farmers they grind with it all.

The elevator kings; they sit in state,
And grade the grain at their own sweet will,
But the unconscionable graders will find; too late
That the people's grist is at their own mill.

And then the toiler, with the sweat on his brow,
Will demand a reckoning of the grasping crew,
And the laws of his country will teach him how
To get for his labor what is justly his due.

The railroad kings, a lesson will learn,
With their generous grants of the peoples' lands
That their cars must be ready, at every turn,
In the market to meet the shipper's demand.

The farmer is taking the lead in the fight,
And he has come in it to stay,
Let his neighbors now stand up for the right,
And they surely will carry the day.
—A FARMER.

Drowned.

Thirteen Towns: It is with the deepest regret that we chronicle the death of Charles E., only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gallaway, aged 12 years, 5 months and 5 days. The circumstances attending this sorrowful occurrence are as follows: At 10 o'clock Monday morning Charley took his gun and started out to hunt partridges, and while crossing Lake Charles, broke through the ice about fifteen rods from shore and was drowned. Not returning at dark, his parents became uneasy as to his whereabouts, the alarm was given, and the whole neighborhood turned out to hunt him up, but without success till the following morning when his body was seen through the ice in the lake. The funeral services were conducted from the family residence on Thursday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Gallaway have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in the great loss they have sustained, the extent of which can only be estimated by those who have suffered in a like manner.

A Close Call.

Warren Sheaf: The other night on retiring, Mr. and Mrs. Campion, who live near Angus, decided to place some $175 which they had in the house, into the oven of an unused stove for safe keeping. The next day being a cold Sunday, Mr. Campion took a notion to light a fire in the unused stove, little thinking of the money, and the two sat down to enjoy the warmth that proceeded therefrom. The fire had not been kindled long when a strong smell of something unusual burning attracted their attention. After looking about and examining the stove, the oven door was opened, when lo and behold the pocket book containing the money and other valuable papers was discovered enwrapped in flames. A hasty plunge into a bucket of water saved the contents from total destruction, though badly scorched. The bills will be exchanged for new ones.

Woodside Defiant.

WOODSIDE, Nov. 25, 1884.

Beaten, but not discouraged, defeated, but not cast down. Have the Democrats really gained a victory? If they have, we are "defiant." We defy them to make times any harder than the Republican party left them. We defy them to make more promises to the people than the Republicans, and we defy them to perform less. We defy them to vote as large an increase of salary as the Republicans did when they got control of the treasury. We defy them to create more offices for special friends. We defy them to get a greater set of rascals than the star route contractors into the postal service. We defy them to put into the New York Custom House a greater thief than Mr. Hayes fired out of the same place. We defy them to find a greater demagogue, egotist and ingrate, than Roscoe Conkling. We defy them to legislate more in favor of capital and less for the laborer and producer. We defy Mr. Cleveland to be more of a dude than Arthur. Upon the whole, Mr. Editor, we defy the Democrats to get more corrupt than the Republican party is at present, and we will give them eight years to corrupt in. At the present time we of the Republican party are like "one who has supped at the table of Kings, and then starved in sight of luxurious things." We heard the music, but yet missed the tune.

FARM NOTES.

American Farmer.

PASTURING MEADOWS IN AUTUMN.

There is a strong temptation to pasture meadows in the fall, particularly if there is a luxurious growth of aftermath. Animals intended for the butcher or those unusually thin would thrive as nicely upon this rich juicy grass, save a large amount of grain, and thus increase his profits, thinks the farmer. A superficial reasoning seems to establish this theory. But the grain is not as great as he supposes. The injury to the meadow will become apparent the next haying season. If the meadow is to be broken up the following spring, then pasture as long as the stock can maintain itself in a thriving condition. The droppings will compensate the soil for the elements removed in the grass, particularly if the stock is mature and fed daily a ration of grain.

But meadows from which a crop of hay is to be removed the following season, are seriously injured by close cropping. The injury is mostly mechanical. If the fall season is a wet one, the soil is soft, and every step packs the ground, makes the surface uneven by indenting it beneath the hoof, and elevating that surrounding it. The roots are broken and exposed to the sun, and much of the grass pulled up by the roots. Grass, like wheat is better by having a good protection from the bitter frosts and keen blasts of winter. A liberal growth of aftermath will furnish this protection and keep the roots in a vigorous condition. The first warm days in spring will start them into action, whereas; if the ground is bare late in the fall, it will be weeks before any signs of life appear, and before the grass becomes matted and high enough to prevent the evaporation of moisture, the sun has baked the ground to almost the hardness of a brick, after which there is but little if any growth.

FATTENING HORSES

Is well understood by jockeys, and may well be studied by farmers who have horses to sell. A horse well fed and kept steadily at work will gain slowly and his flesh will be solid and enduring. This is best for the buyer, and has the advantage for the seller that the horse earns his keeping while being put into condition. The jockey method is to feed oil-meal, exercise a little or not at all, and make a glossy coat, which will soon become rough and staring when the horse is put at hard work.

THE GRASS CROP

Is by far the most valuable grown in this country, or, for that matter, in almost any other; and yet how many farmers are able to tell just what grasses are produced on their premises, and whether substitutions could not be made which would be beneficial? The man who knows all about the varieties of wheat, corn and oats which he is growing is frequently at sea in respect to his pastures and meadows. This is not to be wondered at, inasmuch as our grasses are so largely a natural product, and the selection of seed has received so little attention. However, it is undoubtedly true that increased pains can be devoted to this department of farming with fully as much profit as to any other.

The New England Farmer says: "The best feeders in New England long ago learned that the most profit from swine feeding is made when the pig is converted into a hog in the shortest possible space of time. To do this good breeds are selected, the pigs are fed well from the start, and they are kept growing continuously from birth to the time when they will sell at the best profit; formerly at about a year old, but more recently at from seven to nine or ten months. Most feeders now make two crops of pork in a year instead of one, as formerly. This requires a good deal of care in the breeding and rearing of small pigs, warm pens for the breeding stock, and generous feeding all the time. Pigs treated in this way are always plump, smooth and thrifty."

A correspondent gives the Western Rural his receipt for everlasting fence posts. He says: "I discovered many years ago that wood can be made to last longer than iron in the ground, but thought the process so simple and inexpensive that it was not worth while to make any stir about it. I would as soon have poplar or ash as any other kind of timber for posts. I have taken out bass wood posts, after having been set seven years, that were as sound when taken up as when put in the ground. Time and weather seemed to have no effect upon them. The posts can be prepared for less than two cents. Take polished linseed oil and stir in pulverized charcoal to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this over the timber and there is not a man that will live long enough to see it rotten."

The following remedy is recommended for a horse having scratches: Put his feet and legs in bran poultices for thirty-six hours, then wash clean with warm water and castile soap, and when dry rub the pits of his heels with the following: Take Goulard's extract and olive oil, equal parts, mixed. Do not allow them to get wet after the first washing, but keep them clean by rubbing well with a coarse cloth. Give the following powders night and morning in his feed: Take nitrate of potash, five; pulverized resin, one ounce; mix; make into twelve powders; give regular daily exercise.

A good wash for roofs and buildings is as follows: Slake lime in a close box to prevent the escape of steam, and when slaked pass it through a sieve. To every six quarts of this lime add one quart of rock salt and one gallon of water. After this boil and skim clean. To every five gallons of this add, by slow degrees, three-quarters of a pound of potash and four quarts of fine sand. Coloring matter may be added if desired. Apply with a paint or whitewash brush.

The care of the team is as important as its feed. When the farmer comes in from his day's work, all perspiration and dirt, he feels greatly refreshed by washing up. He needs his supper all the same, but the washing refreshes him, opens all the pores, and contributes to his bodily health. A horse is benefitted by like treatment. A wise and humane driver will always give his team a careful grooming at the close of a day's work; they will not only enjoy it, but will eat better, be less inclined to rub themselves in the stable, and lie down more quietly at night, rest better and be stronger for the next day's toil.

The scratches are often the result of working in the dirt or damp. As a rule, this can be prevented by washing and rubbing the exposd parts dry. We never yet failed of curing scratches on a well fed and properly cared for horse, with warm water and a dry cloth. By a little daily care, washing in cold water, galled shoulders or back can be cured or prevented. We have done the work of a two-hundred acre farm with one pair of horses that were always in good conditon, free from scratches or any other disease, but they had plenty of good feed and the best care, and were stabled twelve months in the year.

STOCKING THE FARM.

A writer of some experience in farming says: A farm can be stocked with sheep for less money than with cattle, horses or hogs. Sheep will come nearer utilizing everything that grows on the farm than any other animal. Less labor will be required for getting feed and stock together. The returns will come in sooner and oftener than any other farm stock, except hogs. Less money is required for sheltering and fencing and less labor is involved in herding, where outside pasturage is accessible, and preferred. And finally a handsome income on the investment can be had without the sale of animals themselves.

HEALTH OF HOGS.

There are many things to observe in preserving the health and growth of hogs, especially where a farmer has a large number of them. The common saying is, "as dirty as a hog." And yet in some respects hogs are particular about cleanliness; and it is especially important that their food, drink, beds, and quarters should be clean. Damp or poorly ventilated places of keeping are the causes of many diseases, and aggravate others.

Hog raising is the easiest and best way to make money if health can be preserved, consequently it will justify any one to incur considerable expense to insure their health. Carbolic acid is the best agent to use about hog-pens and to mix with their food. It is safe, easily understood, and can be used or administered by any one without the least danger. It is cheap, and farmers should use it freely in purifying the pens, beds and any foul places where the hogs frequent.

If hog cholera is in the neighborhood, and hogs have been exposed by having dead ones hauled through the neighborhood, or if cholera is at any place above them on a stream of water, no matter how far hogs should be given carbolic acid three times a day. Ten drops is enough for a hog weighing one hundred pounds, and the dose graduated more or less, as the hog is heavier or lighter.

It can be given in liquid or ground food, and the quantity is so light that it will be freely taken. It is not claimed that it is a remedy for cholera or any other malignant disease, but is good to ward off or intercept any diseases. And it is so healthy an agent that it can be profitably used at all times in a limited way, but when there is any probability of contagion being about use it lavishly, both as a disinfectant and as an inward immunity from disease. A bottle of it should always be kept about the horse stables, and a solution of carbolic acid sprinkled about the stalls and especially if the stables are damp or lacking in ventilation. Its success in all such cases is indisputable.

Southern Question.

The Rural Voice in the south says: Wheat is now worth thirty-five cents per bushel. Flax has been from $1.00 to $1.15 during the greater part of the season. Notwithstanding this great difference, which has existed for a year or two past, though to a less degree than now, there are about three acres of wheat grown in Hutchinson County to one of flax. If there have been 175,000 bushels of flax produced in the county in 1884, there have been nearly half a million bushels of wheat produced, which shows that the people still cling to the old staple crop of years ago with a tenacity that is due to a better pursuit. Corn, flax or any other crop will pay the farmer better.

FARM NOTES.

American Farmer.

PASTURING MEADOWS IN AUTUMN.

There is a strong temptation to pasture meadows in the fall, particularly if there is a luxurious growth of aftermath. Animals intended for the butcher or those unusually thin would thrive as nicely upon this rich juicy grass, save a large amount of grain, and thus increase his profits, thinks the farmer. A superficial reasoning seems to establish this theory. But the grain is not as great as he supposes. The injury to the meadow will become apparent the next haying season. If the meadow is to be broken up the following spring, then pasture as long as the stock can maintain itself in a thriving condition. The droppings will compensate the soil for the elements removed in the grass, particularly if the stock is mature and fed daily a ration of grain.

But meadows from which a crop of hay is to be removed the following season, are seriously injured by close cropping. The injury is mostly mechanical. If the fall season is a wet one, the soil is soft, and every step packs the ground, makes the surface uneven by indenting it beneath the hoof, and elevating that surrounding it. The roots are broken and exposed to the sun, and much of the grass pulled up by the roots. Grass like wheat is better by having a good protection from the bitter frosts and keen blasts of winter. A liberal growth of aftermath will furnish this protection and keep the roots in a vigorous condition. The first warm days in spring will start them into action, whereas, if the ground is bare late in the fall, it will be weeks before any signs of life appear, and before the grass becomes matted and high enough to prevent the evaporation of moisture, the sun has baked the ground to almost the hardness of a brick, after which there is but little, if any growth.

FATTENING HORSES

Is well understood by jockeys, and may well be studied by farmers who have horses to sell. A horse well fed and kept steadily at work will gain slowly and his flesh will be solid and enduring. This is best for the buyer, and has the advantage for the seller that the horse earns his keeping while being put into condition. The jockey method is to feed oil-meal, exercise a little or not at all, and make a glossy coat, which will soon become rough and staring when the horse is put at hard work.

THE GRASS CROP

Is by far the most valuable grown in this country, or, for that matter, in almost any other; and yet how many farmers are able to tell just what grasses are produced on their premises, and whether substitutions could not be made which would be beneficial? The man who knows all about the varieties of wheat, corn and oats which he is growing is frequently at sea in respect to his pastures and meadows. This is not to be wondered at, inasmuch as our grasses are so largely a natural product, and the selection of seed has received so little attention. However, it is undoubtedly true that increased pains can be devoted to this department of farming with fully as much profit as to any other.

The New England Farmer says: "The best feeders in New England long ago learned that the most profit from swine feeding is made when the pig is converted into a hog in the shortest possible space of time. To do this good breeds are selected, the pigs are fed well from the start, and they are kept growing continuously from birth to the time when they will sell at the best profit; formerly at about a year old, but more recently at from seven to nine or ten months. Most feeders now make two crops of pork in a year instead of one, as formerly. This requires a good deal of care in the breeding and rearing of small pigs, warm pens for the breeding stock, and generous feeding all the time. Pigs treated in this way are always plump, smooth and thrifty."

A correspondant gives the Western Rural his receipt for everlasting fence posts. He says: "I discovered many years ago that wood can be made to last longer than iron in the ground, but thought it a process so simple and inexpensive that it was not worth while to make any stir about it. I would as soon have poplar or bass as any other kind of timber for posts. I have taken out bass wood posts after having been set seven years that were as sound when taken up as when put in the ground. Time and weather seemed to have no effect upon them. The posts can be prepared for less than two cents [illegible] boiled linseed oil and stir in pulverized charcoal to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this over the timber and there is not a man that will live long enough to see it rotten."

The following remedy is recommended for a horse having scratches: Put his feet and legs in bran poultice for thirty-six hours, then wash clean with warm water and castile soap, and when dry rub the pits of his heels with the following: Take Goulard's extract and olive oil, equal parts, mixed. Do not allow them to get wet after the first washing, but keep them clean by rubbing well with a coarse cloth. Give the following powders night and morning in his feed: Take nitrate of potash, five; pulverized resin, one ounce; mix; make into twelve powders; give regular daily exercise.

A good wash for roofs and buildings is as follows: Slake lime in a close box to prevent the escape of steam, and when slaked pass it through a sieve. To every six quarts of this lime add one quart of rock salt and one gallon of water. After this boil and skim clean. To every five gallons of this add, by slow degrees, three-quarters of a pound of potash and four quarts of fine sand. Coloring matter may be added if desired. Apply with a paint or whitewash brush.

The care of the team is as important as its feed. When the farmer comes in from his day's work, all perspiration and dirt, he feels greatly refreshed by washing up. He needs his supper all the same, but the washing refreshes him, opens all the pores, and contributes to his bodily health. A horse is benefitted by like treatment. A wise and humane driver will always give his team a careful grooming at the close of a day's work; they will not only enjoy it, but will eat better, be less inclined to rub themselves in the stable, and lie down more quietly at night, rest better and be stronger for the next day's toil.

The scratches are often the result of working in the dirt or damp. As a rule, this can be prevented by washing and rubbing the exposd parts dry. We never yet failed of curing scratches on a well-fed and properly cared for horse, with warm water and a dry cloth. By a little daily care, washing in cold water, galled shoulders or back can be cured or prevented. We have done the work of a two-hundred acre farm with one pair of horses that were always in good condifon, free from scratches or any other disease, but they had plenty of good feed and the best care, and were stabled twelve months in the year.

STOCKING THE FARM.

A writer of some experience in farming says: A farm can be stocked with sheep for less money than with cattle, horses or hogs. Sheep will come nearer utilizing everything that grows on the farm than any other animal. Less labor will be required for getting feed and stock together. The returns will come in sooner and oftener than any other farm stock, except hogs. Less money is required for sheltering and fencing and less labor is involved in herding, where outside pasturage is accessible, and preferred. And finally a handsome income on the investment can be had without the sale of animals themselves.

HEALTH OF HOGS.

There are many things to observe in preserving the health and growth of hogs, especially where a farmer has a large number of them. The common saying is, "as dirty as a hog." And yet in some respects hogs are particular about cleanliness; and it is especially important that their food, drink, beds, and quarters should be clean. Damp or poorly ventilated places of keeping are the causes of many diseases, and aggravate others.

Hog raising is the easiest and best way to make money if health can be preserved, consequently it will justify any one to incur considerable expense to insure their health. Carbolic acid is the best agent to use about hog-pens and to mix with their food. It is safe, easily understood, and can be used or administered by any one without the least danger. It is cheap, and farmers should use it freely in purifying the pens, beds and any foul places where the hogs frequent.

If hog cholera is in the neighborhood, and hogs have been exposed by having dead ones hauled through the neighborhood, or if cholera is at any place above them on a stream of water, no matter how far hogs should be given carbolic acid three times a day. Ten drops is enough for a hog weighing one hundred pounds, and the dose graduated more or less, as the hog is heavier or lighter.

It can be given in liquid or ground food, and the quantity is so light that it will be freely taken. It is not claimed that it is a remedy for cholera or any other malignant disease, but is good to ward off or intercept any diseases. And it is so healthy an agent that it can be profitably used at all times in a limited way, but when there is any probability of contagion being about use it lavishly, both as a disinfectant and as an inward immunity from disease. A bottle of it should always be kept about the horse stables, and a solution of carbolic acid sprinkled about the stalls and especially if the stables are damp or lacking in ventilation. Its success in all such cases is indisputable.

Southern Question.

The Rural Voice in the south says: Wheat is now worth thirty-five cents per bushel. Flax has been from $1.00 to $1.15 during the greater part of the season. Notwithstanding this great difference which has existed for [illegible] though to a less degree than now, there are about three acres of wheat grown in Hutchinson County to one of flax. [illegible] 175,000 bushels of flax produced in the county in 1884 there have been nearly half a million bushels of wheat produced, which shows that the people still cling to the old staple crop of wheat with a tenacity [illegible] crop will pay them [illegible]

Polk County Journal.

Crookston, Minn., Thursday, Dec. 11.

'ROUND HOME.

Aleck Allardyce came up on Monday evening to attend court.

E. O. Flanders went to Hudson, Wis., last week on a bit of a visit.

Sleds, sleighs and sleds. Make a grab before they are gone. Medical Hall. [33-tf]

As Judge Stearns did not arrive court did not convene until Tuesday morning.

Lester Grey has gone back to the old country for a visit of a few months duration.

M. E. Bartlett starts to-night for a short visit at his old home in Clifton Springs, N. Y.

J. B. Roame has gone for a short visit to Wabasha County. He intends to bring back some cheap fresh pork.

Christmas cards did you say? Well, just go to Potter & George, and see if they don't beat the bugs in variety and low prices, Medical Hall. [33-tf]

Wm. Wylis was in from his farm on Thursday last. It is pleasant to see his genial countenance on our streets occasionally.

Every Democrat in Polk County ought to buy some of those Cleveland toys from Potter & George of Medical Hall. 33-tf

M. W. Jenson was up from Garden on Monday, from whom we learned the sad particulars of the death of Mr. Henry Witty.

We warn you all. If you don't take advantage of the bargains at Medical Hall it is your own fault. We are bound to sell. Potter & George.

Our fine weather took a bit of a cold this week, yet it is by no means cold and dreary. So far we have had a remarkably mild winter.

J. L. Daoust, of Carman, is going to Quebec for a two months visit. He did not tell us so, but we imagine that he is going to bring back another fine horse to take the place of the noble animal that died last summer.

D. Sulsback was in the city last week in the interest of those celebrated gold standard cigars, made only by his firm at Grand Forks. That they are an excellent article we know by experience. Call for the Gold Standard and take no other.

Get there Eli! To Medical Hall. Toys, toys, toys, cheap, cheap, cheapest. 33-tf

Leo Laurent hauled 126 bushels of No. 1 Hard wheat to the round elevator at Carman one day last week on a McKinnon Bro's wagon, with a light team of horses. How's that for a load? We imagine he was not as heavily loaded going back, as he could doubtless carry all the money he received for it in a hollow tooth.

Those mechanical toys at Medical Hall are the wonder and delight of young and old. It will pay you to see them. Potter & George. 33-tf

Ed Post, Charlie Seely's new barkeeper arrived on Saturday last and is duly installed at his post of duty. He is said to be one of the best mixers in the business. Ed is one of the old-timers in Polk County having come to Fisher in 1876 but it has been several years since he has seen Crookston and he notes many and great improvements.

Best Patent Flour $2.25 per hundred lbs. at Hack & Gallasch.

Lawyer Ryan has gone back on railroading for the present and will practice law in our city. We promised we would that we would say nothing about the time he went to Angus, recently, forgot his overcoat on the train and had to go to Winnipeg after it, so that we shall not say that it is so. But if you want to enjoy a bit of a joke at his expense just mention it to him "wanst."

The place to buy toys, from a brass watch up to old Santa Claus himself is at Medical Hall. [33-tf]

Seldom is it our duty to record so sudden a death as that of Henry Witty, of Garden, which occurred on Saturday night, Dec. 6th. Mr. Witty had been in Crookston for several days proving up on his claim and left on the 4 o'clock a. m. train for home. At Beltrami he met Mr. M. W. Jenson with whom he rode to Garden, arriving at the house of a neighbor, Mr. Chris Olson, about dusk. After a few minutes Mr. Witty started for home, but got only a few rods when he was suddenly taken with severe griping pains in the bowels. Returning to Mr. Olson's, a messenger was hastily dispatched for Dr. Nelson, who, did all that could be done for the suffering man but without avil. Mr. Witty died about dark on Saturday evening. He leaves a wife and four children, the youngest about seven weeks old. Mr. W. was a man about 39 years old, respected by all who knew him, and his loss will be a severe blow to his wife and little ones. At this writing we have been unable to learn what the physician pronounces the cause of his death.

Whoop-a-la! We are bound to scalp anything in the way of prices on Christmas and New Year's presents for old and young. Medical Hall. 33-tf

Our thanks are due to all of those who have responded to our request for settlement on subscription. If this state of things continues we shall be able to resume our usual size on Jan. 1st. We would again call the attention of our friends to our premium offer and remind them that it is for payment in full and one year in advance AT REGULAR SCHEDULE RATES. Some have mistaken the offer, although it was plainly stated, and have sent in their dues at $1.50 per year expecting to get the premium in addition. We distinctly stated that we could not allow the usual rebate of fifty cents and give the premium too. The regular price of THE JOURNAL, published every week, is TWO DOLLARS per annum unless paid in advance. To all who will pay up at these rates and one year in advance we will give as a premium the American Farmer free for one year. Or to all who will pay in full before Jan. 1st, '85, we will accept payment at $1.50 if inside of Polk County, or $1.60 outside of it. If this offer is accepted, we cannot include the Farmer. Times are hard we know, and we intend to give our patrons the advantage of the best terms we can offer trusting that they will meet us in the same spirit and do the best that can [illegible]

Fine winter weather.

Wm. Box is building a fine residence on Jerome's addition.

Don't forget the festival at the M. E. church to-morrow evening.

Geo. C. Reis is going to his old home in Pennsylvania to spend the winter.

J. C. Davis, of St. Hilaire, is serving his country by doing jury duty this week.

Mr. A. C. Rhinehart intends to start for a visit to friends in Oswego Co., N. Y., next week.

John T. Johnson will boss the Dew Drop while the proprietor goes out to hold down his claim.

The balance of our Japanese goods we will sell at 50 per cent below first cost, M. Van Dyke & Co.

Ira De Camp is engineering the Spy of Atlanta, which is a good guarantee that it will be well managed.

Conductor J. B. Copeland talks of moving his family to Barnesville as soon as he can find a house there.

J. W. Slee, of Warren, paid us a very pleasant call on Monday. He was in attending to some contest cases before the Land Office.

Bro. Churchill will go out and sit down on his claim after the holidays. He dassent go before, 'cause—'cause he has got his orders.

We would say to the people of Crookston and vicinity that we have received our Christmas and New Year's cards, the finest ever brought to this city, which we will sell at a very low figure, M. Van Dyke & Co.

Mine host Bennedict, of the Commercial, took a spin to St. Paul last week. He did not find business more brisk anywhere than here.

Fine stationery a specialty at M. Van Dyke & Co's.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist church will give a fair and festival at their church to-morrow (Friday) evening. All are invited.

Herb is opening out the biggest stock of Christmas goods you have seen since. Go round and see what he has'nt got if you can name it.

We mean it. Call at Medical Hall and see their Christmas goods before you buy. You can save money in these hard times. 33-tf

Wheat is going up but prices remains as low as ever at Hack & Gallasch.

For some time Potter & George have been troubled by an excess of water in their cellar and it is now discovered that a break in the water-main causes all the trouble.

Cash Hinman left last week for his old home in Parishville. It is not often that we feel so bad to see our citizens leaving, but to see all our Cash leaving us—(Oh! come off!)

Now is the time to subscribe for THE JOURNAL, when you can get two papers for the price of one. We do not know how much longer after Jan. 1st this offer will be made.

Charlie Seeley went to St. Paul last week to take a course of medicine. He has been troubled with rheumatism for some time and he will try the effect of Turkish baths and things. We trust he may receive the benefit sought.

A new stock of photograph and autograph albums selling very cheap at M. Van Dyke & Co's.

Don't forget the Spy of Atlanta, benefit for Col. Cobham Post No. 90, at the opera house on Tuesday and Wednesday evening of next week. The boys have worked hard to get up a good show and deserve ample patronage.

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week "The Spy of Atlanta," a spicy drama of the war will be presented at the Opera House for the benefit of Col. Cobham Post, No. 90, G. A. R. Tickets will be sold for 25, 50 and 75 cents. A good time is anticipated and it is hoped the boys will have a good turnout.

I have got ten first-class sewing machines that I will close out at cost before January 1st, 1885. Any one wishing a good machine will do well to call at once and look them over.
[32-34] E. M. WALSH.

Don't forget the farmer's meeting on Wednesday. We have letters from prominent farmers in the county who are coming, and we expect to see an interesting meeting. Hon. Charles Canning has been invited and is expected to be here. Come one, come all, and let us reason together calmly and dispassionately upon the situation.

Mr. F. T. Haseltine, the veteran nurseryman of Crookston, goes to Madison, Wis., next week to enjoy a well deserved rest of a few weeks. Mr. H., by unceasing toil and unremitting attention has founded and built up a large business in our midst and we are gratified to know that it is proving a financial success. He will return with the little birds of spring to resume his labors in the nursery.

Hack & Gallasch have a large stock of winter goods, which they must sell by Jan. 1st 85. Call and see them and buy for $1.00 what will cost you $1.50 elsewhere.

Al. Kaiser and Louis Foss came in from the Thirteen Towns last week. They tell of a little game that some are playing up there that ought to play out. It seems that sometimes a half-breed will be in some saloon when somebody wants to treat and among others the h. b. will get a dram. Then some smart Aleck will straightway hie himself to the halls of justice and enter complaint against the saloon keeper for selling liquor to Indians. This business is said to be far more lucrative than wheat raising and some are making a regular business of it. It should be stopped.

Van Dyke & Co's Star Drug Store is fast becoming the popular drug store of Crookston. Hank says that since they have put in the electric light that he can see so well that he can make prices so low that everybody will buy.

Farmers' Mass Convention.

A Convention of the farmers of Polk County is hereby called to meet at the city hall in the city of Crookston on Wednesday Dec. 17th 1884 at 2 o'clock p. m., to discuss plans of action for the coming Legislative session and other important matters that will be brought before the convention. We have agitated this wheat matter for over a year, we have elected a representative upon that issue and now if we would not have our labor in vain we should formulate some line of action for that representative to follow. Let every farmer in Polk County, who is interested in the wheat business, and every farmer is, more or less, be in attendance at that meeting. [32-33]

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First Publication Dec. 11th, 1884.]

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Walter B. Moore and Mary A. Moore his wife, mortgagors to James McLaughlin mortgagee, by the failure on the part of said Walter B. Moore and Mary A. Moore to pay the interest which became due and payable on said mortgage, on the 1st day of November 1883, the sum of fifty ($50) dollars, and on the 1st day of November 1884, the sum of fifty ($50) dollars, amounting to the sum of one hundred ($100) dollars, and said mortgage containing a clause whereby the failure on the part of the mortgagors to pay said interest when the same became due empowered the said mortgagee or his assigns to declare the whole sum of principal and interest due and payable by such default at his or their election. Said mortgage being dated the 5th day of November 1881 and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of November 1881 at 4:35 o'clock p. m. in book "E" of mortgage deeds on pages 415 and 416, and said mortgage was duly assigned by Selina McLaughlin executrix of said James McLaughlin mortgagee, to George McLaughlin, by an instrument in writing, dated the 21st day of April 1883 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Polk County, on the 27th day of October 1883, at 12:10 o'clock p. m. in book "M" of mortgages on pages 470 and 471, and said mortgage was duly assigned by said George McLaughlin to Etta S. And said Etta S. Brown, assignee of said mortgage, having exercised said option does hereby declare the whole sum of principal and interest secured by said mortgage now due and payable by reason of such default, and there being now due and unpaid on said mortgage the sum of five hundred ($500) dollars principal and interest amounting at this date to the sum of one hundred and five 84-100 dollars, amounting in all to the sum of six hundred and five and 84-100 dollars ($605.84-100) and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise for the recovery of said debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, which by reason of the defaults above stated became operative, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Crookston, County of Polk, and state of Minnesota, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, by the Sheriff of said county, on Thursday the 22d day of January A. Still Another.

A granger delivered to the P. & H. elevator at Warren, his crop of wheat consisting of over 6,000 bushels, taking a surrender from the P. & H. Co., for that amount of No. 1 Hard wheat. This he sent below. Wishing to draw a little money on his wheat he wrote below for a statement and when said statement arrived it informed him that he had about 4,000 bushels of No. 1 Hard and the balance, after docking one pound per bushel on the whole was No. 1 Regular. He naturally felt indignant at this barefaced attempt at a steal and immediately replied that the little game is too gauzy and wont work. He is now patiently awaiting a reply to see whether the attempt will be made to bulldose it through. Oh, these wheat speculators are not making any money on wheat this year (?) Poor fellows they are objects of pity!

Gold at Duluth.

Just now there is great excitement over the alleged discovery of gold along the north shore of Lake Superior, in the vicinity of Duluth and Duluthians are in a great flutter over it. Now it may all be true that Duluth is about to have greatness thrust upon her by the discovery of the richest gold mines on the earth—we take ours with a large grain of salt, please—but we are of the firm opinion that the city of Duluth has been for years SLEEPING on the richest gold mine the world ever saw, one that if properly developed and worked would make her among the richest and greatest cities in the world, and she still continues to sleep and dream of gold mines which MAY someday develop her into greatness—and may not! The golden stream of life giving wheat from these Red River wheat field mines annually pour into Duluth by millions of bushels and, what then? Pass right along to an eastern market as wheat. Duluth sits on the fence and sees this golden stream flow along year after year without as much as a wish to take advantage of her natural position to manufacture it into flour, content if she may haply secure a small per cent in fees for handling it. For 16 miles up the St. Louis River from its mouth is a succession of falls and rapids which furnish an unlimited water power, a power sufficient to supply mills enough to grind all the flour needed to supply the whole world with bread. It does not require a very great stretch of the imagination to see ocean steamers loaded with flour for England, yet Duluthians do not seem to see them even in imagination. No, Duluth seems perfectly contented to sit there, perched upon her moss-covered hills and dream of future greatness, allowing Minneapolis to hold her supremacy as the first flouring city in the land while she might be a veritable queen, reigning on her throne at the head of navigation if she would but use the gift nature has so generously bestowed. If Minneapolis to-day had the one-tenth part of Duluth's water-power she would bid defiance to the world for years notwithstanding her position as an inland city, because her citizens have the enterprise to make the most of the limited power she possesses. This passive policy may be the best one for Duluth to follow. She may sit still and wait to have greatness thrust upon her through the north shore gold mines but these same mines may build up a rival city nearer the mines on the lake shore while if she but developed and utilized her magnificent water-power, that very consideration alone would make her position impregnable and would, in case there should be anything in the aforesaid "gold mines" force all that trade to her doors. Candidly we expect that some day Duluth will rank among the largest, and most prosperous cities of the Union, but that day can never come until she improves the opportunities that Nature has so graciously given her.

ANOTHER DODGE.

A granger reports a new dodge. He took his wheat to an elevator where it was weighed in at five bushels more than the machine made it, took his elevator receipts therefor and had the wheat shipped to Duluth. When he received his receipts from the wheat at Duluth there was a shortage of 100 bushels. The original amount was less than 1,000 bushels. Upon investigation he was told that as he had called for a special bin he would have to stand the racket. The granger replied that he "had known before of rats hiding behind a bin but thought that a special bin was a mitey poor place for a MAN to try to hide behind." This case has not yet been settled and will doubtless come up to confront the rascals when wanted.

Peterson's Magazine for January is certainly the most beautiful number ever issued, even of that progressive lady's-book. There are two steel-engravings, each a gem in its way: "The Rag-Baby," after the celebrated German artist, Knaus; and "A Bud Among Blossoms," after the hardly less celebrated Carl Schon. Next, there is a colored pattern for a curtain-border, etc., etc., a most exquisite and costly affair; at retail it would certainly cost fifty cents. The double-sized fashion-plate, printed from steel, and colored by hand, is also a miracle of beauty. As for the stories, etc., they are the best possible; all original, and all by American writers. Mrs. Ann S. Stephens begins a powerful novelet, "A Motherless Girl," which will bring tears to every eye. Mrs. John Sherwood, of New York, in "The Lost Ariadne," carries the reader into the very heart of that exclusive Fifth Avenue society of which she is so distinguished an ornament. Among the other noticeable contributors are Mrs. R. Harding Davis, Frank Lee Benedict, and the author of "Josiah Allen's Wife;" and the "Buyin' a Feller," by the latter, is the funniest thing of the kind we ever read. For ladies or families of refinement, "Peterson" is the magazine; and its price is as low as its merits are high, for it is but Two Dollars a year, with great deductions to clubs, and costly premiums to persons getting up clubs. Specimens are sent, gratis, if written for, to get up clubs with. Address Chas. J. Petterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

St. Paul Globe: A farmer in Barnes County states in this way what is needed: "At present the farmers are wholly at the mercy of the elevator companies, and have no redress whatever against any injustice the elevator agent may inflict. If the farmer enjoys the privilege of shipping his grain in bulk he need not necessarily accept the grade, or suffer the dockage to which the elevator agent may feel disposed to subject his wheat. What is wanted to remedy the evil?. It is a law requiring the railroads to give facilities for loading cars with all kinds of grain in bulk on the side tracks to applicants, at the same rates of freight as they give elevator companies. No one can question the justice of this demand. If an act of the above nature was passed by the Legislature it would create an open market, and instead of the farmer being under a one-man power as they now are and have been in the past, outside buyers would establish grain warehouses in this and other wheat centers, and healthful competition would prevail." The last Legislature attempted to cover this ground, but its legislation has not proved effective. The commission it created has done a good deal of traveling and manifested much interest in the affairs of the farmers, but has afforded no relief. The wheat men insist upon equality with the elevators in dealing with the railroads.

Fuel vs. Wheat.

St. Paul Globe: There is a rightful kicking in Dakota over the fact that while wheat and nearly everything else has fallen from 25 to 100 per cent. coal, the chief article of fuel, has not been affected at all. Greed and monopoly are charged as the cause of this oppressive exaction. The farmers and those working with them, which includes pretty much everybody, are becoming thoroughly stirred up over what they regard as their wrongs. Organizations have been formed and the past week meetings held in numerous localities, one at Valley City and one at Fargo. They aim to operate somewhat quietly but effectively. The chief purpose is to devise means to secure what they believe they are justly entitled to for their wheat. They are fully convinced that they have been systematically defrauded by monopolies. One of them relates that his wheat was graded as rejected at home, but he was allowed to ship it himself by using sacks, and it was found to be No. 1 hard. The legislature will be used so far as possible, and then other agencies.

OLD SAUL'S EXPERIENCE.

ST. HILAIRE, Dec. 8, 1884.

Your correspondent while browsing around in the rural districts for items, ran against old Saul Slocum. Saul was just making the blue vaulted heavens jar with his sulphurous oaths, and the way he was putting about three-fourths of an inch in length of steel brad into the hide of one of his steers threatened to make a collander of that bovine wrapper in short order. The only words that he made use of outside of oaths were a puzzle to me. They consisted of two—"rep" and "dem." As I hove to alongside of the old man he threw his badger-skin cap on the ground preparatory to spitting on his hands to take a new hold. I asked Saul what the skirmish was about. "Well, you see, stranger, that blasted dem won't take hold and help pull this load of wood out of the hole he has stopped in, while rep is ready to take right hold and do his share." Thinking that the steers were tired and wanted a breathing spell, I thought if I could get the old man started on some story he would spin it out long enough to give the cattle an opportunity to regain their wind, so I asked the old fellow why he had given his steers such peculiar names. "By gaull," says the old chap, "if they ain't named according to Gunter then I'm no judge of names of things." Before proceeding further in his explanation he drove the brad through his cap, raised it to his head without stooping, run one hand into the pocket of his overalls and brought out about four inches of Lorillard's climax, placed his thumb about one-fourth way down the length of the plug as if dividing it up into four chews, tossed the end into his mouth until his thumb hit his teeth, and with one sway of his jaws he divided that hunk of tobacco just about as smoothly and as quickly as could have been done by the best double back-action tobacco cutter in the market. Tumbling this cargo of the weed over in the hold of his mouth on the larboard side, he continued; "I call this one rep, his full name is Republican; this one I call dem because his full name is Democrat." Old names for steers, said I. "Yes, but then they are characteristic of the critters." How is that, I asked? "Well, in the morning when I hitch up dem just paws the ground and switches his tail, so that a feller can't hardly get near him, he'll swell out his eyes and run out his tongue and beller like mad, and look at me and ask me as plain as can be to be liberated from such company as rep, and he'll tell me by his looks and actions that rep is only a hindrance to him any way, and that if I'll give him a chance to swing himself he'll yank that load of wood into town quicker than a pair of four hundred dollar horses with a silver plated harness, and the way he'll hump his back and swell out his muscle is a caution, I tell ye; and when I go to start 'em he'll dive into the bow and pretty near jerk rep off of his feet and drag rep and load and all along like a race horse; all the time he'll have his eyes rolled out at me to tell me that he knew he could do it. After he has gorn 'bout three miles he'll begin to simmer down, and by the time I git down to old man Hait's his off horn is punching rep back of the ear; and by the time I git down to the widow Hapgood's rep is as far ahead as the yoke will let him go, and hauling all of the load besides doin' considerable to help dem lift his feet off of the ground; and when I get to this mud-hole he lets rep pull the load into the middle and then he'll flop down all in a heap. Yes, stranger, he's just like the Democratic party, they'll start in as though they carried more sand than a double dome locomotive of the mogul pattern, and you'd think there wasn't cars enough in the United States to stall them on any grade. They just seem to ache to carry all the load; they don't want any help from the Republicans or anybody else; all they ask is a chance to get rid of some of their spare strength, they don't want any pay for what they do; they are willing to offset the good the exercise will do them against any trouble it may be to themselves; and just as sure as you are born they will land you in the worst mud on the hul road, and you'll have to get somebody to haul you out or else you'll have to unload, an' its my idea that the people of this country after they've had about the same length of experience with the Democrats as rulers as I've had with this 'orny critter, which is four years, they'll get as much out of patience as I am and do as I am goin' to do, trade off the cuss to some butcher and get a mate for rep, as ain't quite so rambunctious on the start; but he's like the Republican party, when you start to go somewhere or do something you are pretty sure to get there, and on time, too," and the old man mounted the load to throw off the wood so he could haul out the wagon. I thought it was as good a political speech as I ever listened to and good enough for THE JOURNAL. I only hope that if the old man's prediction comes true that the country may be able to unload and extricate itself as easily as old Saul could unload his wood. But I fear that such will not be the case.

OLD SAUL'S EXPERIENCE.

ST. HILAIRE, Dec. 8, 1884.

Your correspondent while browsing around in the rural districts for items, ran against old Saul Slocum, & Saul was just making the blue vaulted heavens jar with his sulphurous oaths, and the way he was putting about three-fourths of an inch in length of steel brad into the hide of one of his steers threatened to make a collander of that bovine wrapper in short order. The only words that he made use of outside of oaths were a puzzle to me. They consisted of two—"rep" and "dem." As I hove to alongside of the old man he threw his badger-skin cap on the ground preparatory to spitting on his hands to take a new hold. I asked Saul what the skirmish was about. "Well, you see, stranger, that blasted dem won't take hold and help pull this load of wood out of the hole he has stopped in, while rep is ready to take right hold and do his share." Thinking that the steers were tired and wanted a breathing spell, I thought if I could get the old man started on some story he would spin it out long enough to give the cattle an opportunity to regain their wind, so I asked the old fellow why he had given his steers such peculiar names. "By gaull," says the old chap, "if they ain't named according to Gunter then I'm no judge of names of things." Before proceeding further in his explanation he drove the brad through his cap, raised it to his head without stooping, run one hand into the pocket of his overalls and brought out about four inches of Lorlard's climax, placed his thumb about one-fourth way down the length of the plug as if dividing it up into four chews, tossed the end into his mouth until his thumb hit his teeth, and with one sway of his jaws he divided that hunk of tobacco just about as smoothly and as quickly as could have been done by the best double back-action tobacco cutter in the market. Tumbling this cargo of the weed over in the hold of his mouth on the larboard side, he continued; "I call this one rep, his full name is Republican; this one I call dem because his full name is Democrat." Old names for steers, said I. "Yes, but then they are characteristic of the critters." How is that, I asked? "Well, in the morning when I hitch up dem just paws the ground and switches his tail, so that a feller can't hardly get near him; he'll swell out his eyes and run out his tongue and beller like mad, and look at me and ask me as plain as can be to be liberated from such company as rep, and he'll tell me by his looks and actions that rep is only a hindrance to him any way, and that if I'll give him a chance to swing himself he'll yank that load of wood into town quicker than a pair of four hundred dollar horses with a silver plated harness, and the way he'll hump his back and swell out his muscle is a caution, I tell ye; and when I go to start 'em he'll dive into the bow and pretty near jerk rep off of his feet and drag rep and load and all along like a race horse; all the time he'll have his eyes rolled out at me to tell me that he knew he could do it. After he has gorn 'bout three miles he'll begin to simmer down, and by the time I git down to old man Hait's his off horn is punching rep back of the ear, and by the time I git down to the widow Hapgood's rep is as far ahead as the yoke will let him go, and hauling all of the load besides doin' considerable to help dem lift his feet off of the ground, and when I get to this mud-hole he lets rep pull the load into the middle and then he'll flop down all in a heap. Yes, stranger, he's just like the Democratic party, they'll start in as though they carried more sand than a double dome locomotive of the mogul pattern, and you'd think there wasn't cars enough in the United States to stall them on any grade. They just seem to ache to carry all the load; they don't want any help from the Republicans or anybody else, all they ask is a chance to get rid of some of their spare strength, they don't want any pay for what they do, they are willing to offset the good the exercise will do them against any trouble it may be to themselves, and just as sure as you are born they will land you in the worst mud on the hul road, and you'll have to get somebody to haul you out or else you'll have to unload, an its my idee that the people of this country after they've had about the same length of experience with the Democrats as rulers as I've had with this orny critter, which is four years, they'll get as much out of patience as I am and do as I am goin to do, trade off the cuss to some butcher and get a mate for rep as ain't quite so rambunctious on the start, but [illegible] like the Republican party, when you start to go somewhere or do something you are pretty sure to get there, and on time too," and the old man mounted the load to throw off the wood so he could haul out the wagon. I thought it was as good a political speech as I ever listened to, and good enough for the JOURNAL. I only hope that if the old man's prediction comes true that the country may be able to unload and extricate itself as easily as old Saul could unload his wood, but I fear that such will not be the case.

A FRAUD SQUELCHED.

St. Paul Globe.

A millfirm that will attempt to rob the wheat growers of the meager little price received for wheat should be exposed. This case, related by The Inter-State, at Gary, in Deuel Connty, seems to be one of the most flagrant, and the prompt action of the Northwestern deserves credit. The paper says:

"One of the most high handed robberies ever perpetrated upon a civilized community was attempted last week Thursday, by the Porter Milling Co. Whitten & Judd, of Rochester, had previously been buying at this place, but from some cause they ordered their agent to stop buying. At this time No. 2 wheat (soft) was selling at 42 cents. The Porter Milling Co. therefore saw that there was a chance to steal a few hundred dollars extra, they being the only buyers, commenced paying but 31 cents a bushel and grading most of it No. 3, soft, thereby lowering the price eleven cents, while at Clear Lake and other points within a radius of twelve or fifteen miles of Gary they continued to pay 42 cents. In some happy manner the news of this state of affairs reached the officials of the C. & N. W. railroad company, and on Friday morning Mr. P. Hallenbeck, assistant general freight agent of the Winona & St. Peter division, and H. C. Garvin, traveling freight solicitor for the Winona & St. Peter division, arrived in town to investigate the matter. Mr. Garvin at once drove over to Clear Lake and found that they were actually paying 11 cents a bushel more than at Gary, which at once convinced him that it was a gigantic fraud on the part of the Porter Milling Co., and he consequently notified them that unless they could pay the same as in adjacent towns, the railroad company would buy wheat themselves and pay an honest price and give lawful weights and grades. This had the desired effect upon Porter & Co., and the price was at once raised to 44 cents. The railroad company will allow farmers the privilege of shipping wheat for themselves, and will charge them no more for cars than they do the Porter Milling company."

Stand by the Farms.

The Pierre Signal recalls this by way of encouragment to farmers: In 1857 wheat sold for thirty-five cents a bushel. The next year came a blight, and everybody wanted to sell and get out of the country, but those who held on to their land in the middle States are to-day the rich men, with land worth over $50 an acre. We can beat the world on wheat, in cost of production and quality. Those who stay by farming, in years to come, will not regret it.

Crookston, Minn., Thursday, Dec. 18.

'ROUND HOME.

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all JOURNAL readers.

Lawyer Martin and Walt Campbell were the Adalites in the city last week.

M. E. Bartlett left on Thursday on a business trip east. Expects to be away six weeks.

Tom Wallace has gone to Lake City and vicinity on a visit for a few weeks duration.

Rev. F. K. Roberts starts on Saturday morning for Buffalo, N. Y. for a four weeks visit to old friends there.

Sleds, sleighs and sleds. Make a grab before they are gone. Medical Hall. [33-tf]

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bivens, of Stephen, Marshall Co., were in the city on Sunday. The Leader says they will spend the winter in Wabasha County.

Christmas cards did you say? Well just go to Potter & George, and see they don't beat the bugs in variety an low prices, Medical Hall. [33-tf]

Charlie Seely is improving rapidly under the Turkish bath regime and hopes to be able soon to come up smiling. He thinks St. Paul a comfortable place to be sick in.

Every Democrat in Polk County ought to buy some of those Cleveland toys from Potter & George of Medical Hall. 33-tf

The St. P. M. & M. R. R. Co. has issued a neat folder descriptive of the country through which their lines run. It is handsomely gotten up and a credit to the enterprise of the road.

The balance of our Japanese goods we will sell at 50 per cent below first cost, M. Van Dyke & Co.

Proud and Macdonell announce this week in a new ad what they are prepared to do, and as they are a business firm, and mean business, it will pay you to drop in and see what they can do for you.

We would say to the people of Crookston and vicinity that we have received our Christmas and New Year's cards, the finest ever brought to this city, which we will sell at a very low figure, M. Van Dyke & Co.

Rev. H. L. House will return in time to preach in the Baptist chapel next Sunday morning and evening. Evening subject "A report of the work doing at the Moody meetings in St. Paul." All are invited.

Fine stationery a specialty at M. Van Dyke & Co's.

It is said that Bro. Osborn, of the Glyndon News, is a candidate for enrolling clerk in the Senate. Mr. Osborn is an A. No. 1 man and the Northwest is entitled to some recognition. We know of no better man for the position.

Wheat is going up but prices remains as low as ever at Hack & Gallasch.

See the Berthiaume Bros. big ad which appears only once on our first page, and note the bargains offered in jewelry. They are an enterprising firm and are not afraid to use printer's ink freely to let their patrons know it. You can always bet your bottom dollar that such generous advertisers will be as generous with their patrons.

Van Dyke & Co's Star Drug Store is fast becoming the popular drug store of Crookston. Hank says that since they have put in the electric light that he can see so well that he can make prices so low that everybody will buy.

Judge D. Brower sends us an order to send THE JOURNAL to him at Santa Cruz, California, and says: "We have just arrived here and will probably make this city our future home. The weather is very fine, NO FROST YET. Flowers all blooming and everything like May. Books and household effects have not arrived yet. Will write you when we get settled."

Hack & Gallasch have a large stock of winter goods, which they must sell by Jan. 1st 85. Call and see them and buy for $1.00 what will cost you $1.50 elsewhere.

Berthiaume Bros., whose broad gauge ad. appears on our first page are intending to establish a branch office on Second street about January 1st to accommodate their growing trade. They are a square dealing firm and are meeting the success they deserve. Drop in and see what the boys can do for you in jewelry, of which and watches they have a magnificent display.

A new stock of photograph and autograph albums selling very cheap at M. Van Dyke & Co's.

The Fergus Falls Daily Telegram has changed from a morning to an evening paper for the same reason that compels every paper in the Northwest to lop off embroideries and go slow on filigree work—close times. The Telegram is an excellent newspaper and deserves the hearty support of every man in Otter Tail County who wishes to see a worthy institution prosper. It is the best paper in Otter Tail County.

Now is the time to subscribe for THE JOURNAL, when you can get two papers for the price of one. We do not know how much longer after Jan. 1st this offer will be made.

During the coming session of the Dakota Legislature the Bismarck Tribune will publish its proceedings in full. Owing to the wheat question this session will be of great interest to everybody in the Northwest, and all can keep fully posted upon its proceedings by sending $2 for the Daily during the session, or 50 cents for the weekly. Send money by postal note or check to The Daily Tribune, Bismarck, D. T.

We learn that the Spectator, at St. Hilaire, is confined to its office by a pied form this week. Well, Harry, it must needs be that disasters must come sooner or later to the best of papers as well as to the best of men, but when they come in the shape of a pied form it takes all the genuine grit a fellow has to prevent his shutting his teeth hard and preaching a little. You have our sympathy, old boy.

Wanted

to buy [illegible] and buggy. Enquire at [illegible] office.

Skipped.

The rumor got abroad early this morning that Dune Morris had skipped out with the receipts of the G. A. R. entertainments and what jewelry he could get away with from Morris Bros. jewelry store. As far as we have been able to learn he took the train last night for Winnipeg. The Sheriff has taken possession of the stock pending an investigation.

The Spy of Atlanta.

Let it not be said that Crookston needs to send from home to import dramatic talent after what she has seen her home talent do. Geo. McLean's suave, bland voice worked in to good advantage as "Farmer Dalton," and his grey hairs gave him a dignity irresistible. He was ably supplemented by Mrs. Morris as "Mother Dalton;" and if you can find a healthier, heartier, prettier, "Edwin," "Charles" and "Little Willie" than were Ed. Wile, Horry Jennings and Georgie Fontaine we haven't seen 'em. Dot vas a fine Dutchman already what H. J. Kertson made of "Yacob Schneider," and dot awkward squad could not be beat. H. Holdrige took the rag as "Pete," while Harry Ducket proved that as a clog dancer his feet had not forgot their cunning. Miss Elsie Jennings personated the young patriot's wife to perfection, while Miss Pet Bunnell grasped the character of Miss Carrie Dalton accurately and rendered her part in a pleasing, easy manner. Ira DeCamp played the villain to perfection (as usual) as did all the other characters who are too numerous to mention. The tableau of the surrender of Lee was grand, while in the other tableau the Goddess of Liberty was seen roosting high on the pedestal of Fame, sweetly gazing down upon the bevy of States yet remaining in the constellation, as if lost in wonder where their fair southern sisters had all gone at. Many of the scenes and all of the actors deserve a better mention than our time or pen is able to afford, and we trust they will take the will for the deed. We believe that the receipts were highly gratifying.

Farmers' Mass Convention.

Owing to the cold snap the Farmers' Convention was not overwhelmingly large, but a goodly number of the solid farmers got together and spent the afternoon in profitable discussion. Kittson County was represented in the person of her leading granger, Capt. H. W. Donaldson, and Norman County was ably represented by the Hon. Charles Canning. The situation on the wheat question and what should be done to protect wheat raisers was discussed at length, with the general conclusion that the necessity for an open wheat market is imperative and must be obtained if wheat raising is to become profitable. One speaker said that the Millers' Association absolutely controls the inspection of wheat at Minneapolis and thus are enabled to keep out independent buyers and cited instances where independent buyers were forced out of the market by the Millers' Association, and urged the importance of having an inspector at Minneapolis whom the Millers' could not control. Mr. Canning assured the farmers of his hearty sympathy in their distress and said that it would be his constant aim and study to do all in his power to procure an open market. The following delegates were elected to the Farmers, State Convention to be held at St. Paul in the early part of January, viz.: M. R. Brown, E. D. Childs and Springer Harbaugh. After a very profitable discussion of the situation the convention adjourned, all present satisfied that it pays to get together occasionally to discuss matters of such public importance as is the present.

WOODSIDE, Dec. 8, 1884.

We of the rural districts are now so far reconciled to the result of the Presidential election that we have settled down to business for the winter. Miss Helen Stoddard is teaching our school, which is a success, and as a teacher she is all that any one could wish. Mr. George Goodrich is running his saw-mill every day and doing good work. Our mail carrier has had some bad luck as we understand one of his horses has been sick; but the mail is just as regular as before, being carried by a man on foot a distance of 20 miles. Uncle Daniel Cameron is now here for the winter. He and Eber have put up a comfortable house at the saw mill and will soon start the saw. We had a pleasant visit from Mr. E. D. Childs and Dr. Putney, of Boston. The Doctor was highly pleased with the country, and very much enjoyed a visit to one of our many lakes, where the party, after cutting through the ice was rewarded by a catch of four fine pickerel. We have an addition to our settlement, at least for the winter, of two youg gentlemen (brothers) F. and J. Canning, who have built for themselves a bachelors hall near Cameron's mill. We wonder why they do not take to themselves some of our good land; and some of our good water, and some of our good timber, and, and, well, it is their own business, and they seem to reason in this wise:

"Bachelors' Hall I vow is the best,
Drunk or sober you can lie down and rest.
No wife to control, no children to brawl,
So happy is he who keeps Bachelor's Hall."

The weather has been so pleasant so far this winter that one almost thinks himself in northern Texas. But no one wonders at it when we consider the change all over our country. Now listen, we will whisper it in your ear, but be sure you do not tell it to any one—Cleveland is elected! T. J. W.

Moorhead Hot in the Collar.

Fergus Falls Telegram.

Geo. Burbank and Sheriff Bradenburg returned from Perham this morning over the Manitoba road, spending Sunday at Moorhead. While there Mr. Burbank talked with quite a number of the leading citizens in reference to the removal of the division headquarters to Barnesville. George says it is expressing it mildly to say that the town is "hot in the collar." They are left a good deal worse than Fergus as the latter place is losing very little. Moorhead went and built the Grand Pacific Hotel which is the finest in the Northwest, with a view of getting the Manitoba road's trade, but with the change to Barnesville the trains will stop there, leaving this splendid $200,000 hotel in the cold. Moorhead is ready to do most anything which will induce another road to come there, and feels certain that the Rock Island will do it. They say they have never bonded to aid anything, but the time has come now, and they are ready to do it. They hint that Fergus can run out a branch and tap the main line running into Moorhead, which of course it will do. With Moorhead and Crookston upon their muscle, and Fergus ready to join in, it ought not to be a very hard thing to get a railroad.

T. B. Walker on the Nelson Pine Land Bill.

In the Pioneer Press of Saturday December 13th, we find the following communication from Mr. T. B. Walker in relation to his attitude toward the Nelson Pine Land Bill. Mr. Walker says:

"In your morning's issue you make some statements regarding my Red River lumber business, and also report my views on Mr. Nelson's Red Lake Reservation bill and the Indian burned timber business, in which your reporter must have mistaken some one else for me. As I was abused considerably last winter for opposing that measure, and from your statement now as a text I am likely to be this winter, I would say as follows: Two years ago I was strongly urged by the people of the valley to come there and build mills and manufacture lumber. After much hesitation I went and established myself there, taking in large amount of capital; and, as you say, the principal amount of the timber comes from outside the reservation. While my mill was being constructed and nearly completed, Mr. Nelson's bill was drawn up without the least care whether it interfered with my business or not—in fact, rather for the purpose of disturbing it—by legislation which would throw upon the market an excessively large quantity of lumber. It was not thought necessary or prudent to inquire whether this suited me or not. This bill provided that one-tenth part of the reservation should be sold each year, and that such portion should be cut and removed within five years. The friends of this bill claimed that there are two or three thousand millions of pine on the reserve. This bill would compel the removal of the timber within fifteen years, or 200,000,000 per year average cut. This excessive amount would not only exceed all possible demands of the Red River Valley, but would demoralize Duluth, Minneapolis and Stillwater, and compel them to demoralize the market farther south. I asked Mr. Nelson to remove these restrictive clauses, offering to aid the bill if he would. This he would not do. I then asked him to modify and give more time to remove the timber. This he also refused to do. I then took measures against the bill. Afterward Mr. Nelson thought best to modify the bill giving a little more time to remove the timber and I withdrew all opposition and came away. Excepting a letter to a private citizen regarding the bill, I have not opposed it in any way since. I do not remember of any representative of your paper referring to the measure since.

You say that I claim that the fire which ran through the woods and burned some of my lumber camps and timber was set to kill timber to cut under the dead-timber permit of the Indian office. I do not think it was set for that purpose, and have not made such a statement. But I do regard the action of the government in prohibiting the Indians in cutting live timber as unwise and unjust. If they have proprietary rights in the territory set apart for them, they ought, at least, to have the benefit of some portion before it is rendered worthless, or practically so, by being fire-killed or blown over and partly decayed and worm-eaten. This would also remove any temptation to set fires, and would also encourage the Indians to work, as well as to furnish them means of support. Now, while it is strictly appropriate and only justice to both the settlers in the valley and the Indians on the reservation that the timber should be properly and judiciously marketed, yet any legislation calculated both to reduce the value of the timber when sold, and to hasten its destruction afterward, is certainly at variance with the general views of the world regarding the timber supply. It has not been my intention to say a word regarding this matter, and had not your local editor expressed what he supposed were my views, during my absence, and without my knowledge, I should not have done so."

FARM NOTES.

American Farmer.

CHARCOAL.

Charcoal has recently been recommended as an addition to the food of animals, as it increases their power of accumulating fat, and promotes the rapid and healthy production of flesh. This was recently proved by taking the live weights of two lots of sheep; and simply separating them by an ordinary net; the artificial food, corn and cake being carefully weighed out to each lot alike daily, one pint of charcoal being added to one lot only. When reweighed, prior to selling to the butcher, the increase in weight was in favor of charcoal by 16.25 per cent. Sanitation causes easy and complete digestion; and assimulation only can account for these results, which charcoal alone can accomplish. The charcoal should be given mixed with the food, except in urgent cases, when it may be mixed in water or thin gruel, and given as a drench. This dose is one pint to every twenty-five head of sheep or lambs, one quarter pint per head for full-grown cattle, horses or pigs, half the quantity for young cattle and two teaspoonfuls to one desert spoonful for young calves, daily, when suffering from disease or ill condition. To keep in good health, and fortify against diseases, the dose should be given two or three times per week, according to the class of food they are having, and the state of atmosphere. The best plan is to wet a quantity of bran pollard (malt-combings:) mix the charcoal amongst it, and then among the food you give them. For rapid and healthy fattening of cattle it should be used daily among their food. Charcoal for internal and medicinal purposes must be pure vegetable charcoal, free from all irritating and injurious foreign matter. The charcoal when coming into the user's possession must be kept perfectly dry, and free from any ill-smelling surrounding, such as the vapors of a stable, or artificial manures, etc., or it will absorb them, and thus become septic, and of no medical value. It is better kept in a closed tin or tin canister with a tight cover.

MISTAKES OF FARMERS.

1. To think that anyone can farm; that a man who has starved as a canvasser for a patent toothpick or had been unsuccessful as a carpenter, can jump into a business requiring high intelligence and persevering efforts, and, being utterly unfamiliar with details, be able to make money.

2. The idea that a large farm, half stocked, and poorly cultivated, pays better than a few acres well and carefully tilled.

3. What is it but the worst kind of a mistake to pay hundreds of dollars for good farm machinery, and allow it for want of proper shelter to rot and become useless a year or so sooner than it should?

4. It is a mistake to let year after year pass by with no attempt to improve the quality of the farm stock. Blooded cattle pay. They make beef quicker; the cows give more and richer milk. Better blood in horses pays. A Norman or part Norman colt is a valuable piece of property.

5. To let foolish pride or narrow minded prejudice prevent the adoption of new methods when they have been proved by practical men.

6. To get up after the sun, lean on fork-handle, speculate for an hour or two upon what the weather is going to be, let the weeds get a good start and then wonder why farming don't pay.

7. To leave a lot of unchopped wood wet or half-split wood at the pile, a lot of old harness hanging in the kitchen, and muddy tracks in the dining-room and expect to see the woman folk good natured.

8. To have a lot of half-fed, emaciated, lonesome-looking fowls, roosting dejectedly in some old cottonwood tree when a few good healthy, Plymouth Rock or Brahuma chickens properly housed, would make the poultry yard an honor, instead of a disgrace.

BREAKING HORSES.

Thousands of horses are only half broken. They are handled enough so that they can be herded along the road, but this cannot be called driving them, says the Breeder's Journal. The horses should be taught to obey the voice as well as the rein, but how many do not half obey the rein, much less the voice?

Too little attention is paid in breaking a horse to stand still when he is hitched to a post. They are continually backing and moving forward, and rubbing and being restless. One way to prevent this is to back the wagon wheels so that it is hard work for them to move the wagon. This can be done by having a short piece of heavy rope with an iron hook on each end. This rope should be just the length so that the hooks can be hooked under the felloe of the front and back wheels. This holds the wheels still, and if the horse moves the wagon, he must slide the wheels, as they will not turn. A piece of hard wood can be used instead of the rope. [illegible]

It is stiffer and a little better.

Too many in breaking their horses, put them immediately at work. This, while effective, destroys somewhat the action and temper of the horse. A free actioned colt, when he is broken to drive should be harnessed with a horse of the same disposition as near as possible. This will teach him to imitate desirable qualities of his mate. A well broken horse is much preferable to use in breaking a young horse, and long drives on a wagon will organize a colt quicker and better than anything else.

For our own use we much prefer to break colts at first with a bitting rig. This gives them a better mouth and a more wholesome respect for the bit than any other method. Two weeks of the bitting bridle three hours a day, with the colt turned out by himself in a safe lot with a good fence, is worth many dollars to a horse in after life. Never tie a colt or an old horse with an old or insecure halter, for if the colt never knows that he can break his halter, he will very soon give up trying.

MANAGEMENT OF COWS NEAR CALVING.

W. H. White, of Worcester County, Mass., has the following in the Country Gentleman:

"I do not say that the following suggestions are new, but they may be of service to some who have little experience. Ordinary cows should be dried off four to six weeks previous to calving. About two weeks before calving, commence to feed potatoes or roots of some kind, about a peck per day, increasing as calving time approaches, to about a half bushel daily. If roots cannot be had, a few quarts of good mill feed (not corn meal) wet up with boiling hot water and fed as warm as the cow will eat it, will be a good substitute. As soon as she drops her calf, and the calf has taken its first meal, milk as clean as possible, add a little warm water to the milk and stir in about a quart of rye meal or shorts, and give the mess to the cow. If the cow is dainty and refuses the mixture give her milk alone; she will probably drink that. By pursuing this course you will rarely, if ever, have trouble about your cows not cleaning. If the cow is very weak great care should be taken for a few days not to overfeed her, and never allow her immediately after calving to drink cold water, but give a pail of lukewarm water at a time, for a day or two. After recovering from the effect of calving the feed should be liberal, and at least one feed a day should be roots, or some good substitute. If you have potatoes they will prove best; if not give parsnips, carrots, beets or turnips, valuable in the order named. If you have neither of these it is better to buy potatoes at 75 cts. per bushel than not to give any roots at all. Feed for several days, when some substitute may be used. If you have potatoes slightly diseased or have been frozen slightly, they are better than no roots, if fed in moderate quantity after being trimmed. If cows are out to grass, of course roots are not indispensable, but they are good at any time fed in such quantity as circumstances may require.

A common mistake with many farmers is in wintering cows poorly. They should go to pasture in good condition, and have a feed of dry fodder at the barn every day for a week or two at least after being turned out. They should have feed through the winter which will keep them thriving, so that they will come to pasture in good condition. If such a course is pursued, the reward comes surely in a well-filled pail of good milk, rich in cream, which rightly cared for gives good yellow butter which needs no butter-color to tempt customers. Two good cows, well kept and cared for, will bring more profit than half a dozen half-starved, poorly cared for cows. Having good cows well cared for is not all, but another important item is in having a good milker."

Young men of England have been advised to come to America to engage in raising mutton for the English market. It is predicted that the supply cannot keep pace with the demand. Perhaps the young men of America will do well to conside such advice as being worthy their own attention.

POINTS IN THE JERSEY'S FAVOR.

Much is being said at present in favor of the Jerseys as dairy cows. A breeder thus summarizes their good qualities. He may exaggerate somewhat, but his opinions are of interest nevertheless.

Jersey cows make more butter annually, compared with the food they eat, than any other breed.

Jerseys make better butter than any other breed, better grain and better flavor.

Jerseys milk is most profitable, because it contains more butter per quart than that of any other breed, its cream rises quicker and its butter comes quicker.

Jersey butter brings from two to ten cents a pound more than any other, as a rule throughout the United States; hence, on ninety farms out of a hundred where butter is a specialty, the introduction of Jersey blood will change the butter making from a dead loss to a net profit.

Butter farming is more profitable and healthful and refining than truck farming, beef farming, poultry or pig raising.

For every cent lost on account of the Jersey's smaller carcass, there are two cents gained on account of better butter and larger annual yield.

HOW TO SELECT A COW.

Many persons select a cow from their knowledge of a single indication denoting quality, but it is claimed that the best sign for richness of milk is deep orange color inside the ears. Such is said to be infallible, but there are accompanying points that assist the expert in making this selection from a number. After examining the ears feel the skin on the rump and observe that it should be soft, velvety and falls again to its position when the hand is removed. The hair should be fine and silky, with a yellowish cast underneath. The milk veins should be very prom- [illegible] nent, uniform, and the udder well balanced, extending full to the rear, and well forward in front to the main milk ducts that extend along the belly. The bones should be fine, the eye mild and expressive, the body showing a tendency to avoid accumulating fat, the teats even and at regular intervals, with the escutcheon well defined, dandruff being easily rubbed therefrom, and the cow should give indication of being a good feeder.

SUMMER BUTTER,

as usual, is yielding but a small margin of profit. The wise dairyman has lessened his production during this period of low prices and has arranged to have his cows calve in the fall and winter so that he can make an even supply from October to May—the period of highest prices. The summer glut in the butter market will not be obviated until this practice is more generally adopted. Winter dairying comes in a season when other work is not pressing and adds immensely to the amount and quality of the manure made. Summer butter has to be made in the busiest season of the whole year, sells at the lowest prices, and the manure product in summer is comparatively poor in quality and small in quantity. We believe figures will show that the seemingly smaller cost of summer production does not compensate for the gains in winter dairying.

Wasteful Wintering.

New York Tribune: Much feed is thrown away every winter in the common management of stock. I do not mean the fodder actually wasted in farmyard or stable, but that which is fed, especially to younger animals. For instance, suppose I feed four calves and six yearlings all winter, and in spring they are no larger than in the previous fall, how much of the fodder they consumed is wasted? I will have a pile of manure proportionate to the fodder eaten, but it will be worth no more than the cost of the labor in taking care of the stock. In order to realize any gain on these animals I must wait for the extra growth they may make in summer pasture. This, undoubtedly, is the actual result of wintering a large proportion of the young cattle in this country. They are fed enough to keep them alive, or it may be batter than this, to enable them to about hold their own, that is, not to fall away much.

When an animal is fed enough to maintain life and locomotion, and this of course is necessary, such additional feed as it may have will naturally, if it isn't required to keep it from freezing (which is not often the case,) make growth, if a young one, and more flesh if it is matured or full-grown. This growth, or increase, will be according to the kind of food given. If the food is coarse or weak, such as straw or poor hay, the animal cannot consume more than enough to maintain vitality, hence stronger or richer food is essential to profits. I should expect to obtain this, with calves, by giving them each a quart a day of bran and oil-meal. They would be kept in a roomy stable with a rack for hay on one side and feed-boxes for the meal on another, and a trough in the stable for water, to be carried to them. I would not let these calves out of the stable once during the winter. It would be cleaned out every day, and a little fresh litter scattered on the floor.

If these calves had a feeding of roots with their meal, I should consider their management about perfect, but all the roots I had might be needed for the fattening of cattle. But the calves would get all the hay they would eat. The yearlings, on the contrary, would be tied in stable with halters. This treatment would get them accustomed to being handled, making them gentle. They would be fed double the quantity of the same mixture, bran and meal, with a change from hay to cornstalks. They would be turned into the yard in the middle of the day for drink. This two quarts of meal would make growth, and in spring I would expect them to be larger than they were in the fall, and in equal, if not better, condition. This would more than pay for the meal, because they would go into pasture strong and vigorous, and begin to grow at once, which would not be the case if they had nothing in winter but the coarse fodder, for then it would take a month perhaps to get them started so that they would thrive.—[New-York Tribune.

We are publishing several "continued stories" which will be of general interest to but few. In ordinary times such things would not look well, but when we consider the general depression of business throughout the world it is not surprising that a few mortgage foreclosures will occur in a new country like this once in awhile.

The best five cent cigars is at the Red Star Grocery, Broadway. [51-tf]

Many of our patrons have accepted our offer of the American Farmer, but there are yet a great many who have not and who should have this excellent farm journal especially when they have the opportunity to obtain it at no extra cost. We have delayed sending in our list awaiting the motions of some who [illegible] a desire for the Farmer and [illegible] quite ready. We shall forward our list about Jan. 1st, and all who [illegible] to avail themselves of this opportunity should do so at once. We do not know that this offer will be made [illegible]

The cold weather has developed several cases of petty larceny. Three able-bodied men were furnished lodgings and board in the city cooler for the laudable (?) attempt to provide themselves with sufficient clothing. The New York store, which was a victim, sells goods cheaper than one can steal them, so it is no excuse to try to nip clothing even if the weather is a trifle cool.

Upon learning of the death of Henry Witty, we at once wrote Dr. Nelson his attending physician, and the following is his reply, received too late for last week's issue:

ALDAL, Dec. 16, 1884.

EDITOR POLK COUNTY JOURNAL:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your favor of Dec. 8th I can say that the late Mr. Witty's last and fatal disease according to all symtoms was strangulation of the bowels, accompanied with all the usual, in such cases, terrible pains. He had lately been subject quite frequently to cramps and colicky pains in the bowels and had a couple slight attacks while in Crookston for the last time. In all my extensive practice I never saw anybody suffer so severely as Mr. Witty did, and being a friend of mine I could not have been more sorry for him and family if I had been a member of same.

Very respectfully,

DR. A. NELSON.

The Duluth News endorses the JOURNAL'S views upon the gold question wherein we attempted to show how great a city Duluth could become if she should build a few flouring mills. We are glad that our neighbor recognizes the importance of the suggestion and we trust that the News will not cease to preach it until Duluth becomes what Nature intended her for and what she should be—the greatest flour manufactory in the world. Minneapolis, an inland city with her half-dozen pepper mills controls the wheat from a vast region of country and every poor farmer in the Northwest keenly feels how she abuses her trust. In order that wheat-raising may become profitable it is absolutely necessary that our wheat should be ground in this country before it has to be handled much. We can grind much of it ourselves but if there were mills enough at Duluth to grind the surplus the product could seek an eastern market by an all water route—as it should do and the result would be to this country the wealth that she produces and deserves. Never, until just this thing is done can we ever expect to make wheat raising a success, financially. Should this country use the means provided by Nature there is no good reason why wheat should not always command as good a price in our home markets as it does in New York. Let Duluth build as many mills as she can; let the canal system between Duluth and this country be improved and then our wheat will bring just as much right here at home as it generally does in New York. Duluth has the opportunity to make of herself the most important flouring city in the world if she has the enterprise to do it.

Lake Superior and Red River Canal.

Moorhead News.

The Duluth Tribune of a few days ago contained a communication from Mr. Geo. P. Stuntz, in which he labors to show that the building of a canal, connecting Red River with Duluth is a feasible project; that it would not cost more than twice as much as a railroad to build, while it would be able to transport grain for one-fifth the amount charged by the present railroads. We reproduce the more salient parts of his argument:

Duluth has all the advantage of cheap lake freights, but her facilities to the west by rail are certainly inadequate to handle the crops already produced to the westward, in the fall of the year, when the farmer most wants to reach a market.

The belt of country west of Duluth for 400 miles is one of the best wheat-producing countries in the world. It is equally adapted to general farming. It is free from malarial diseases. It abounds in natural grasses of superior nutritious qualities, and is therefore well adapted to stock raising and the manufacture of butter and cheese. This applies as well to the timber lands as to the prairies. Comprises 51,200,000 acres of land. The crops for the last five years have demonstrated that twenty bushels of No. 1 hard wheat can be raised off an acre. Now, if one-fourth of this country is cultivated in wheat, it would give us 256,000,000 bushels annually to handle. This is the trade Duluth has in her grasp. Will she reach for it?

In 1878 there was comparatively no wheat shipped from the district named. In 1884 there was raised in this same district 20,000,000 bushels.

From nothing to 20,000,000 bushels in six years! At this rate of progression, how many years will it be before we will be compelled to handle 100,000,000 bushels of grain, if we keep up with the settlement and development to the west of us? Twenty million bushels of wheat will require 20,000 trains of twenty cars each to move it—equal to thirty-three trains a day for sixty days. Now, look ahead ten years when we will have to handle six times that amount, or two hundred trains a day. No three roads, nor six, can haul it, and Duluth and the producers must look to some other and cheaper mode of transportation. It now costs fifteen cents a bushel to bring wheat from points on Red River to Duluth. Lake freight from Duluth to Buffalo are three cents for 1,000 miles—when up freights can be secured. It is safe to put down lake freights from Duluth to Buffalo, one year with another, at four cents a bushel. It is then apparent that it costs nearly or quite four times as much to haul a bushel of grain from Fargo or Moorhead, on the Red River, a distance of 200 and 230 miles, as it does to carry the same amount from Duluth to Buffalo, more than four times that distance.

Ten thousand bushels of wheat is an average train load. Our heaviest lake barges can carry eight train loads. What the northwest needs is to have her rivers improved by a system of slack water navigation, and connected with a few short sections of canal of sufficient capacity to enable barges of six to eight hundred tons burden to pass freely. Then a steam barge carrying 600 tons of freight could take from three to four lighters in tow with an equal amount of tonnage in each and make from four to six miles per hour—averaging say five miles per hour. Each tow would then be able to bring to Duluth a load for the largest size lake barge, equal to eight train loads; and this can be brought from Red River, with such improvement, for three cents a bushel. Consequently, it would increase the value of grain at Red River twelve cents a bushel.

I see from estimates made by the papers that Duluth will have handled in 1884, 13,000,000 bushels of wheat. Then there has been paid to the railroads, for hauling this wheat from Red River, the sum of fifteen cents a bushel, amounting to $1,950,000, or $1,600,000 too much.

With each increasing year this extra increasing freight will bear down on the farmers. Can it be avoided? Yes! Improve the St. Louis River by dams and locks from Fond du Lac to the mouth of the Floodwood River; thence cut a canal northwesterly to a bend of West Swan River; thence down said river four miles to the Mississippi River; thence up the Mississippi to the mouth of Turtle River; thence up this [illegible] Red Lake; thence through Red Lake River [illegible] with Red River of the North, at or near Grand Forks, Dakota. About forty miles of actual canal and 265 of river channels and lake of sufficient width and depth to use steam power to the best advantage without danger of washing the banks.

They Can If They Will.

Moorhead News: The fact that the Northern Pacific railroad company has advertised a reduction of the tariff on oats to Duluth and St. Paul of eight cents per hundred, is the best evidence possible that the railroads doing the hauling of grain out of the Red River Valley can afford to haul it at a rate much lower than they have heretofore exacted, and it is also true that if they can haul oats for fifteen cents per hundred pounds they can just as well haul wheat at the same rate. The reason of the reduction of the rate on oats is that the price of that grain was so very low that, with the high rate of transportation, oats would not move. Producers would not haul them to the stations and no oats were going forward to the grain markets. The reduction of eight cents per hundred in the hauling rate is an inducement thrown out to the producers to send their oats to market, and it will have that effect. If producers throughout this region were able to keep back their wheat, there is no doubt at all that the railroad companies would reduce the freight tariff on that grain also, as an inducement for it to move. But the producers are not in a condition to do so, which fact is as well known to the railroad companies as to the producers themselves; therefore the rate is kept up because there is no alternative, and it is dollars and cents in the coffers of those "soulless" and heartless corporations. If we had rival roads leading direct to other markets, to Chicago or St. Louis, it would work out the same salvation, and for the good of the people we hope the Moorhead & Southeastern road will be pushed ahead until the much needed independent route is made available. A reduction of five cents a bushel in the cost of carrying our wheat to market, would make a difference of ten dollars an acre in the value of our land. The owners of land therefore can well afford to subscribe for the stock of a road which will solve their difficulties and bring about good times again.

THE WHEAT THIEVES.

Marshall County Leader.

The Crookston Journal tells how a granger took his wheat to an elevator, and the noble-hearted, honest, liberal elevator man weighed it in at five bushels more than the machine made it, took his elevator receipts for it and shipped it to Duluth. When he received his receipts for the wheat at Duluth there was a shortage of 100 bushels. The original amount was less than 1,000 bushels. Upon investigating the swindle he was blandly informed that he had called for a special bin, and would therefore have to stand the robbery. Now, we do really believe that an elevator man COULD come pretty nearly to being honest if he were to try real hard, but the way the elevator system is arranged now, it is so allfired easy to steal about one sixth of all the wheat they handle that they [illegible] amount of No. 1 hard wheat. This he sent below. Wishing to draw some money on the shipment, he wrote to the head rendezvous of the robbers, to see what he had left; and the statement that he received informed him that he had about 4,000 bushels of No. 1 hard, and that the balance, after docking one pound per bushel on the whole, was No. 1 regular. Oh, no, the Elevator-Millers Association nabobs don't steal! They are entirely too hightoned for that! They recline on "floury" beds of ease, in grand palace homes, array themselves in fine linen and fair sumptously every day. O, they are above stealing! They just only say to the farmer, "Thumbs up!" and then go through him for whatever portion of his crop they want. Col. Frank James is out of employment and would make them a President well worthy of their esteem and confidence.

Bright, brisk and beautiful is The American Agriculturist for January. The forty-fourth volume opens with more than the usual fullness and freshness, and is indicative of renewed vigor in this long established authority on all matters pertaining to the farm, garden and household. Upwards of a hundred fine engravings by several noted artists, as Cary, Bennett, Folsom and Giles adorn the pages and explain the carefully prepared articles upon a wide range of important subjects. Joseph Harris, "Walks and Talks" from the West. Col. Weld is "Among the Farmers." Dr. Thurber, A. S. Fuller, Dr. Halsted, Dr. Slade, and a score of other well-known writers are represented by their best efforts. "One of New York's Breathing Places," is a charming specimen of engraving, and illustrates one of the minor parks, "Remodeling a Barn," Plan for a Convenient Kitchen," Exterior and Interior of a Western Cattle Ranch," "A Cheap Poultry House," and a "Good Smoke House," give the usual number and variety of farm buildings, Improvements in a Well Curb, Mouse Traps, Garden Fences, A Harness Holder, Slop Trap, etc., are among the useful farm appliances. Illustrated descriptions of "Showy Pigeons," "Shetland Ponies," "Silver-Gray Rabbits," etc., are of general interest. The Household department shows how to make a "Scrap Book," a "Foot Warmer," a "Tea-Pot Cosey," a "Remodeled Looking Glass," a "Clock Panel," a "Rustic Screen;" has hints on Cooking Apples, and other useful and timely matters. The boys and girls have a touching story, "Old Red Spitfire," beautifully illustrated. The Doctor's "Talks," explain the Cow's-foot in the Milk, and the ways of Water Beetles. Mr. Coryell describes "A Living Boat," etc. Price $1.50 per year; single copy 15 cents. Address Publishers of The American Agriculturist, 751 Broadway, New York.

PROFIT IN POULTRY.

American Poultry Adviser.

Says James Rankin: "I have sixteen cows in my barn; my neighbors call them good ones. The milk is sold in the neighboring village at remunerative prices. It requires the labor of two men and one team to milk, care for these cows and deliver the milk. I have 850 pullets in my yards; with but a [illegible] young men who are running a poultry and dairy farm conjointly. The one is an invalid, keeps 1,000 hens, the care of which occupies about one half his time. The other keeps thirty cows, from which he makes butter of so good a quality that it really commands from eight to ten cents above standard price. This man raises the usual farm crops, reads the papers carefully, knows something of labor and its application, and runs his gang of four or five men with an eye to business. Yet the invalid brother, with less than one-tenth of the labor and capital employed, clears double the money from his 1,000 hens that his brother does from the whole farm. One instance more; E. Damon, of South Hanson, Mass., told me not long since that he had 750 pullets in his yards, 600 of which has been confined in one building all winter without stepping out of doors. The building is 60x40 feet, divided into four compartments, each 15x40 feet, 150 fowls being confined in each. These fowls had furnished him with thirty-five dozen eggs per day through the winter. The eggs were taken at the door at 42 cents per dozen. This gave him $11 clear profit per day, with only a few hours care."

FARM NOTES.

American Farmer.

The following are the points desirable in practical farmer's hogs: Fine short nose, dished face, fine ears, good width between eyes, eyes not too prominent; a straight, broad back of uniform width from shoulders to ham, short legs and fine bone. He should stand well up on his pins, fat at any age, and, if well reared, make a weight of 250 to 325 pounds at 11 months. Now, does the foregoing description of a model farm hog fully describe the well bred Berkshire? I think all will agree that it does, and I am satisfied that if the reader will notice the character of all the various breeds of swine he will find that the most popular ones are those which come nearest to the model farmer's hog presented above.

THE BENEFITS OF BLOOD.

Life is too short to waste years of valuable time in the attempt to get the best stock by selection and feeding. Let us profit by the life work of others and the skill of nations in developing superior breeds. Let us procure the best breeding animals of these established types and come at once into the benefits of the improved blood. If the full blood animal does cost a few hundred dollars outlay at first, it is cheaper and more profitable in this short life to thus bound into the benefits of blood, and we will soon sell young stock at advanced prices to repay the first outlay and a handsome profit. A man can't afford to walk to Chicago or New York nowadays when he can go by railroad so much quicker. So it is in breeding improved stock. All enterprising farmers who think at all about making money, want some good stock. How best to get it is the problem. Their prejudices formerly arrayed them against the fine stock breeders, but the breeders of improved stock have won a universal victory over this prejudice. Improved stock is now finding every Western farm and the advocate of scrub stock is an exception.

Poultry Adviser: Nothing is so attractive around a farm house as a flock of evenly marked and handsome plumaged fowls. They are an ornament to the door yard and interest and profit to the owner, while a flock of mongrels is only an eyesore to all beholders. If the boys and girls are allowed a small flock of fine birds for their own, to care for and to make from them all they can, you will find that they will make them pay.

BE NOT DISCOURAGED.

Grand Forks Herald.

Some folks are inclined to take a too gloomy view of prospects, as reported from the country, and imagine pictures of destitution and horror. God knows, so far as the railroad and Millers' monopoly could do it, the life's blood has been sucked from the people, but the country has great vitality and the people are endowed with wonderful fortitude and endurance. History tells us that when England attempted to force a tax of about two pence on tea, our forefathers dressed themselves as Indians and entering the vessels, unloaded the cargo into the harbor. They had not a tittle of the provocation that the Northwestern farmers and merchants have, but the latter as has been well said, are the most patient slaves that ever carried a galling yoke. Whether it is due to betrayal, cowardly leadership, or what, matters but little. The stupendous fact remains as a monument of their servitude, that they patiently toil and do nothing timely to resist oppression. The only explanation we can find for this is that there has never been known anywhere such a bountiful harvest of golden wheat, which may be considered as heaven's rescue of the settlers from the voracious maw of the monopoly. This immense yield has this year enabled every careful and industrious farmer, who had learned a lesson from the bitter experiences of the past, to meet his obligations. A Herald representative has learned from the different loan agencies, investment companies and machinery agents these significant facts. While last year many were unable to pay even interest and had to be carried over, the farmers have this year almost universally paid up interest and installments due. Sales and foreclosures are very scarce and it begins to look more sombre for the officers and newspapers which usually get handsome money out of sales, than it does for the borrowers. The few sales which have taken place and may yet come, are rather forced by the carelessness and indifference of the mortgagors, than from any cause traceable to the country. Another salient fact which is the true measure of the value of the country, is that the farmers who came here with enough money to purchase stock and machinery, and rented farms have in a few years made enough money to purchase stock and machinery, and rented farms have in a few years made enough money, notwithstanding the monopolistic curse, to buy large farms and commence on their own account next year. These men are not discouraged and will put in all the wheat they can next year, beginning as soon as the dust commences to fly. They see in the present condition of affairs, that by industry and frugality next year they will make enough to be independent. Those only have cause to be despondent who are mortgaged body and soul to the monopoly and its corelatives. God pity them.

Poultry Advisor: Nothing is so attractive around a farm house as a flock of evenly marked and handsome plomaged fowls. They are an ornament to the door yard and interest and profit to the owner, while a flock of mongrels is only an eyesore to all beholders. If the boys and girls are allowed a small flock of fine birds for their own, to care for and to make from them all they can, you will find that they will make them pay.

BE NOT DISCOURAGED.

Grand Forks Herald.

Some folks are inclined to take a too gloomy view of prospects, as reported from the country, and imagine pictures of destitution and horror. God knows, so far as the railroad and Millers' monopoly could do it, the life's blood has been sucked from the people, but the country has great vitality and the people are endowed with wonderful fortitude and endurance. History tells us that when England attempted to force a tax of about two pence on tea, our forefathers dressed themselves as Indians and entering the vessels, unloaded the cargo into the harbor. They had not a titlie of the provocation that the Northwestern farmers and merchants have, but the latter as has been well said, are the most patient slaves that ever carried a galling yoke. Whether it is due to betrayal, cowardly leadership, or what, matters but little. The stupendous fact remains as a monument of their servitude, that they patiently toil and do nothing timely to resist oppression. The only explanation we can find for this is that there has never been known anywhere such a bountiful harvest of golden wheat, which may be considered as heaven's rescue of the settlers from the voracious maw of the monopoly. This immense yield has this year enabled every careful and industrious farmer, who had learned a lesson from the bitter experiences of the past, to meet his obligations. A Herald representative has learned from the different loan agencies, investment companies and machinery agents these significant facts. While last year many were unable to pay even interest and had to be carried over, the farmers have this year almost universally paid up interest and instalments due. Sales and foreclosures are very scarce and it begins to look more sombre for the officers and newspapers which usually get handsome money out of sales, than it does for the borrowers. The few sales which have taken place and may yet come, are rather forced by the carelessness and indifference of the mortgagors, than from any cause traceable to the country. Another salient fact which is the true measure of the value of the country, is that the farmers who came here with enough money to purchase stock and machinery, and rented farms have in a few years made enough money to purchase stock and machinery, and rented farms have in a few years made enough money, notwithstanding the monopolistic curse, to buy large farms and commence on their own account next year. These men are not discouraged and will put in all the wheat they can next year, beginning as soon as the dust commences to fly. They see in the present condition of affairs that by industry and frugality next year they will make enough to be independent. Those only have cause to be despondent who are mortgaged body and soul to the monopoly and its corelatives. God pity them.
